WILL NOT WITHDRAW FROM WAR IN SPAIN UNTIL FRANCO WINS

Fascist Grand Council in Rome Makes Outright Statement Regarding Italian Volunteers—Expresses Satisfaction With Hitler's Address—"Tardy" Denial Brushed Aside

ROME, Feb. 5 (AP).—The Fascist Grand Council served notice today that Italian volunteers "will not abandon" the Spanish struggle "before it is ended, as it must end, with Franco's victory."

The council expressed "profound satisfaction" with Chancellor Hitler's Reichstag speech on Monday in which he pledged support for Italy in any war against her, but refrained from disclosing Italian demands on France.

TIME INOPPORTUNE

A communique issued after the meeting, which ended at 1:15 a.m. (4:15 p.m., P.S.T.), indicated that Premier Mussolini did not think the moment had arrived to state Fascist demands on France, but would push on for a complete victory for Insurgent Generalissimo Franco.

Il Duce outlined the "general international situation" to the council, and Foreign Minister Count Ciano explained to members "certain particular aspects of Italy's foreign policy," it was announced.

The Grand Council will meet again next Friday, and Italy's supreme defence commission will hold its sixteenth session tomorrow in a meeting which has been scheduled since the beginning of the year.

TO CO-ORDINATE BOYCOTT PLANS

Vancouver Bodies Select Committee Aimed Against Japanese Goods

VANCOUVER, Feb. 4 (CP).—Delegates from nine trade unions and various other organizations tonight formed the Greater Vancouver Joint Boycott Committee, aimed at co-ordinating activities of all groups interested in boycotting goods from Japan, Germany, Italy, and "other aggressor nations."

The meeting which formed the committee was called by the Vancouver, New Westminster and District Trades and Labor Council.

President E. A. Jamieson, of the Labor Council, chairman of tonight's meeting, said the trade boycott was organized originally against goods from Japan, and later had been extended to include "all aggressor nations." He said the movement has gained strength owing to the "treatment of Jews in Germany."

IS CO-ORDINATING BODY

Mr. Jamieson added the new joint committee was intended as a co-ordinating body only and would not interfere in any way with work being carried on by any individual group.

Dr. W. G. Black, president of the League of Nations Society, Vancouver branch, who attended with a watching brief for that organization, stated League members are "keenly interested" in the struggle between democracies and Fascist nations.

Dr. Black said that at a meeting held earlier in the week, the Vancouver branch of the League formed a committee which will call on storekeepers and "key men" in department stores to urge them not to buy Japanese goods.

He emphasized that in boycotting Japanese goods there is no intention of discriminating against British Columbia Japanese.

Stands Under Man to Break Jumper's Fall

Eveleigh scurried under him to break his twenty-foot fall. It didn't hurt the constable. Hospital attendants said the jumper—who gave his name as George Dickson but didn't say why he jumped—suffered only a slight knee injury.

MARTIAL LAW IN HUNGARY

Drastic Action Taken to Combat Political Violence After Bomb Blast

BUDAPEST, Feb. 4 (AP). — The Government tonight clamped martial law on Hungary to combat political violence and empowered special courts to impose the death penalty by hanging within forty-eight hours after arrest in certain cases.

This action, taken by the Cabinet at an emergency session, was prompted by a bomb explosion last night in Budapest's largest synagogue which injured about twenty persons.

NEWSPAPER SUPPRESSED

The Cabinet also suppressed for two months the Nazi newspaper Magyarsag, personal organ of the jailed Nazi leader, Ferene Szalast, who was sentenced last July to three years' imprisonment for "incitement."

The Government made no comment on the suppression. The Magyarsag had been clamoring for stern anti-Semitic laws.

The Government also suspended for one month the newspaper Nyolc Oral Ujsag, organ of former Premier Court Stefan Bethlen, which had been mildly critical of Premier Bela Imredi's regime.

The declaration of martial law was to be published tomorrow in the official gazette.

BY SPECIAL TRIBUNAL

The chief provision of the decree was that persons possessing explosives, bombs or firearms with intent to make an assault on public order, or who are caught while committing acts of violence, are to be tried by a special tribunal.

The special tribunal may make only one of two decisions—innocent or guilty and subject to the death penalty within twenty-four hours. Trial must take place within twenty-four hours after arrest.

It was the first martial law in Hungary since 1931.

Manchukuo Guards in Continuous Clashes With Soviet Forces—Outcome Not Given

TOKIO, Feb. 4 (AP).—The Government of Japanese-dominated Manchukuo today reported four days of almost continuous fighting between Soviet Russian forces and "Manchukuo guards," but failed to state definitely the outcome or number of casualties.

Communiques issued at Hsinking, Manchukuo capital, indicated Russian "assaults" had been thrown back. While they described the "defending" forces as "Manchukuo guards," it was believed here that Japanese regulars were involved.

VISITORS HIT WITH REFUSE

PANAMA CITY, Panama, Feb 4 (AP).—Anti-Italian demonstrators today pelted with eggs and vegetables an automobile bearing the Italian Minister and an Italian admiral and aides on an official visit to President Dr. Juan Demostenes Arosemena.

The car was badly spattered and so much refuse flew in before the window could be raised that the party had to return to the admiral's visiting flagship to change clothes before carrying out the call.

The disturbance occurred about noon as the automobile carrying Minister Italo Capanni and Admiral Eduardo Somigli passed Santa Ana Plaza on the way to the Presidential Palace. It lasted between fifteen and twenty minutes.

ON WORLD CRUISE

Somigli is commander of the Italian seventh naval division, consisting of two cruisers, on a world cruise to demonstrate Italian naval strength.

Police reinforcements arrived shortly after the disturbance started and began gathering in the participants. Originally the demonstrators were a small group numbering between thirty and fifty but increased as store and office workers left their jobs for lunch.

Coming Here To Confer on Highway Plan

(Special to The Colonist)

OTTAWA, Feb. 4.—Hon. Charles Stewart, chairman of the three-man Canadian committee to consider the feasibility of the proposed highway through British Columbia from Seattle to Alaska, said tonight that he had proposed to the three members of the United States-Alaska committee that a joint meeting be held in Victoria about March 1.

"Victoria is the proper meeting place as there is a great deal of information in the hands of the Provincial Government," Mr. Stewart said. "I am advised the American committee members are keen to get on with the inquiry, and they will probably agree to the suggested sitting about that date."

THE Colonist cameraman was on hand when the contingent of 400 University of British Columbia students arrived in the city yesterday at 1 o'clock for the Varsity athletic "invasion." In the top picture the students, greeted by their friends and representatives of various sport associations, are gathered in front of the C.P.R. ticket office, while in the lower photograph is part of the contingent on the decks of the Princess Norah as she docked. In the athletic engagements, Varsity defeated Victoria in the McKechnie Cup Rugby match at Macdonald Park, 16-6, while the second U.B.C. fifteen defeated Victoria College, 8-3. Victoria women won the inter-city grass hockey match, 2-1, and the Dominoes scored a 43-29 decision over the Thunderbirds at basketball in the evening. The special chartered boat left for Vancouver at 9:45 last night.

Gt. Britain Asked To Negotiate for Ending Civil War

Spanish Government Reported to Request Opening of Mediation — Qualifications Considered to Militate Against Success—Negrin's Three Points to Be Background

PERPIGNAN, France, Feb. 4 (AP).—The Spanish Government was reported in reliable quarters tonight to have requested Great Britain to open secret negotiations with insurgents to end the savage two-and-one-half-year-old civil war.

The reported overtures contained such broad qualifications, however, as to raise the question of their success.

They were disclosed at a time when Premier Juan Negrin's Government took first steps toward abandoning all of Catalonia — Spain's northeastern corner—to insurgent Generalissimo Francisco Franco's conquering forces in an attempt to make a last stand in the central "island" quarter of Spain, embracing Valencia and Madrid.

It was understood that in the request to the British Government the Spanish Government authorities stipulated that the peace talks

DEATH CLAIMS INDUSTRIALIST

Sir Henri Deterding, Oil Magnate, Dies at Saint Moritz

SAINT MORITZ, Switzerland, Feb. 4 (AP).—Sir Henri Deterding, who rose from poverty to become one of the richest and most powerful of the world's industrialists, died this afternoon at his villa here.

The Netherlands-born oil magnate and "Rockefeller of Europe" was seventy-two years old.

Sir Henri, the possessor of a personal fortune estimated at between $150,000,000 and $200,000,000, retired in 1937 from the director-generalship of the monster Royal Dutch Petroleum Company.

FAR-FLUNG HOLDINGS

He was the guiding genius in the development of the far-flung corporation which, at the time of his retirement, embraced a group of 200 companies with 40,000 employees.

Sir Henri was a frequent Winter visitor to Saint Moritz, because he enjoyed ice-skating with members of his family.

Sir Henri, thrice married, is survived by two sons and one daughter by his first marriage and two daughters by the second. His first wife died, a divorce dissolved his second marriage, and he was married in 1936 to a thirty-eight-year-old secretary.

His sons maintain residences in England and the Netherlands.

ELLSWORTH ADDS TO LAND CLAIMED

HOBART, Tasmania, Feb 4 (AP).—Lincoln Ellsworth laid claim to 430,000 square miles of South Polar territory for the United States today when he returned from an Antarctic expedition aboard his base ship Wyatt Earp.

Ellsworth's new claim expanded the territory which he previously had claimed. In a radio message from the Antarctic last month he said he was claiming "80,000 square miles of country never seen before by the human eye" as the result of his aerial exploration.

The explorer, whose expedition started last Autumn, plans to sail for the United States on March 4.

Thousands Homeless As Floods Spread in Ohio Valley Section

Damage in West Virginia, Ohio and Kentucky Estimated at $1,000,000—Crest of High Water Expected Today

CINCINNATI, Feb. 4 (AP).—The rich valley of the Ohio from Pittsburgh to Louisville, whose residents still carry vivid memory of 1937's record flood, saw relief from the threat of a new inundation tonight as freezing temperatures stemmed the flow of tributaries.

Predictions of fair weather throughout West Virginia, Ohio and Kentucky brought signs of flood abatement, but the cold weather added to the suffering of thousands of residents. West Virginia listed three known deaded and upward of 1,500 homeless.

The Red Cross in Washington estimated more than 5,000 families were homeless in the high water area, and West Virginia authorities tentatively set the damage of the past three days at more than $1,000,000.

Indiana reported high water, but lighter snow there gave hope there would be little destruction.

Landslides and high water blocked roads there and in Kentucky, where Mayor W. K. Evans of Middleboro reported two aged men died of exposure in the flood area.

POLICE INTENSIFY EFFORTS AS WAVE OF TERRORISM SPREADS

Houses of Parliament at Westminster Closed to Public—Reported Plot Uncovered to Blow Up National Buildings in England and Assassinate Politicians and Police Officials

Governments Co-operating In Fight to End Outrages

LONDON, Feb. 4 (AP).—The Houses of Parliament were closed to the public today for the first time since the Great War as a precaution while Britain sought to suppress the wave of terrorism attributed to the outlawed Irish Republican Army.

The Sunday Dispatch reported raids on I.R.A. houses in Belfast resulted in discovery of plans to blow up Buckingham Palace, Windsor Castle, the House of Commons and the Bank of England.

The newspaper's report, which lacked official confirmation from any source, said the raids also uncovered details of a plot to assassination British politicians and high police officials.

The seized documents were flown immediately to London, The Sunday Dispatch said, and officials of the British Home Office and Scotland Yard conferred on protective measures.

INTENSIFY SEARCH

Authorities intensified their search for hidden supplies of explosives and investigated illegal purchases of chemicals believed to have been used in bombing outrages.

Earthquake Too Slight To Damage

LOS ANGELES, Feb. 4 (AP).—An earthquake shook portions of the Los Angeles area at 3:40 p.m. today, causing a flood of inquiries to the police department.

There were no reports of damage At the Carnegie Institution Seismological Laboratory, Pasadena, experts said the shake made only a mere "wiggle" on their recording sheet. They estimated the shock centred about fifteen miles from the laboratory but that it was too slight to have caused damage.

WILL PURCHASE MORE AIRCRAFT

Britain Announces Order for 250 More Planes From U.S. Factories

LONDON, Feb. 4 (AP).—The Air Ministry announced today that Great Britain will purchase 250 warplanes in the United States in addition to 400 already on order.

Fifty of the new planes, the Air Ministry said, will be Lockheed general reconnaissance machines and the other 200 will be North American Aviation Company trainers.

"In view of the improved deliveries in prospect under orders for aircraft placed by the Air Ministry in the United States last year," the announcement said, "it has been possible to negotiate an increase in contracts for delivery within the period originally contemplated

EARLY DELIVERY EXPECTED

Delivery of the original British order of 400 planes at an estimated cost of $35,000,000 was expected within from one to two years. The Air Ministry announced this order last June and indicated then it might be increased.

The first British purchases were recommended by a mission that went to the United States last year. Two hundred planes were ordered from the Lockheed Aircraft Corporation of Burbank, Calif., and 200 from North American Aviation Inc of Inglewood, Calif.

PROVINCE TO AID VICTIMS

Free Lots at Hedley for Families Dispossessed in Severe Land Slide

The Provincial Government took steps yesterday to help twelve families dispossessed by the disastrous fall of rock upon a section of the town of Hedley from a bluff on Stemwinder Mountain. Premier Pattullo announced that the Province would give free lots to the families concerned, if they will re-establish their homes in the area.

Two persons lost their lives in the land slide, which a few weeks ago precipitated huge boulders down the side of the hill into the town of Hedley. Three houses were demolished and several others rendered unsafe to live in.

By donating the land for reconstruction, the Province hopes to contribute towards a permanent solution of the problem. The evacuated area will probably be withdrawn.

Power Fight In Tennessee Valley Ends

NEW YORK, Feb 4 (AP).—An eventful chapter in the long and bitter feud between the New Deal and the United States utilities was brought to an end today with announcement of an amicable arrangement under which the Tennessee Valley Authority will purchase all electrical properties of Commonwealth & Southern Corporation in Tennessee.

The T.V.A. agreed to pay $78,600,000 for the electric properties of Tennessee Electric Power Company, a subsidiary of Commonwealth & Southern.

SNOW GENERAL ON MAINLAND

VANCOUVER, Feb. 4 (CP).—A slight snowfall covered Vancouver and surrounding districts tonight following reports from Prince Rupert that a blizzard is raging over the northern part of British Columbia.

About an inch of snow fell in the downtown district of Vancouver, while surrounding areas reported from 1½ to 2 inches.

An early Spring was promised on Thursday when the groundhog failed to see his shadow, and yesterday four blackfish were seen by Chief Signaller "Bill" Mooney swimming through the First Narrows from Vancouver's harbor to the open water of English Bay.

SIGN OF GOOD WEATHER

Signalmen claim the large fish seek protection of the harbor when rough weather is in the offing and that their return to open water is a sign of good weather.

The Dominion Meteorological Bureau forecast slightly milder weather with sleet, probably heavy, and part snow accompanying strong south to southwest winds or moderate gales during the next twenty-four hours.

Trans-Canada Air Lines eastbound plane, which left here at 7:20 p.m., was forced to turn back on account of icing conditions, and arrived back at the airport at 8:30 p.m.

Deep Snow in Hills Forces Rescue Party To Seek Assistance

Reinforcements Going From Mission to Help Bring Injured Trapper Out Through Miles Of Mountain Wilderness

MISSION, B.C., Feb. 4 (CP).—Reinforcements planned late today to leave before nightfall on a hike through twenty-five miles of wilderness to bring back thirty-five-year-old Leonard St. Andressay, who severed an artery in his foot last Sunday.

Two members of a rescue party who set out last Monday to bring back the injured woodsman returned today to report they would need more men to help carry him 3,000 feet down the steep slope of the Cypress Hills.

The pair, George White, partner of St. Andressay, and Jimmy Stillwell, said the woodsman's condition was good, but that they would be unable to bring him down by sled. Two members of the original party remained with St. Andressay when they came back.

Two others will form the reinforcements.

PORT ALBERNI TO HAVE PLANE LINK

Board of Trade Notified Vancouver-Zeballos Service May Make Stop at City

PORT ALBERNI, Feb. 4. Notification was received here today by the Board of Trade that the Government intends to double the subsidy for the air mail contract between Vancouver and Zeballos on condition that the planes land at Port Alberni both coming and going for the purpose of taking on and landing both passengers and mails.

When the contract was first let to the Canadian Airways about six months ago there was no stipulation that the planes would have to land at this city, with the result that they passed over the town. Although businessmen in Vancouver send mail to Zeballos in two hours, businessmen in this West Coast city have had only a ten-day boat delivery unless the letters were sent over to Vancouver and rerouted by air mail from that city.

A. W. Neill, M.P. (Comox-Alberni) has worked hard in conjunction with the local Board of Trade in order to secure this change in the flying service.

Thirty Members of Royal Marine Band Coming With King

Organization Long Favored by Royal Family—Portsmouth Division Looking Forward to Canadian Tour—Holding Special Rehearsals

By EDWIN S. JOHNSON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

LONDON, Feb. 4.—Special rehearsals and extra sessions of ceremonial drill have been added to the daily routine of a select group of Royal Marine bandsmen of the Portsmouth division—and they're revelling in it.

Envy of their comrades, they have been chosen to "say it with music" as the 32,000-ton battle cruiser Repulse steams across the broad Atlantic next May with Their Majesties, the King and Queen.

Although normal strength of the band is sixty, it was found impossible to take more than half on the historic voyage. Of the thirty bandsmen selected, twenty will be accommodated aboard the Repulse with the remaining ten going on one of the escorting cruisers.

Under the direction of Lieut. F. V. Dunn, made a member of the Royal Victorian Order in the last New Year's Honors' list, the band for years has enjoyed the honor of providing musical entertainment for Royalty. The Royal Marine Band is permanently attached to the Royal yachts, and usually accompanies the King when he goes aboard his yacht the Victoria and Albert.

The band's trip to Canada, however, will mark the first time it has accompanied a reigning sovereign aboard since 1911, when George V sailed to India in H.M.S. Medina for his coronation as Emperor.

MASTER MUSICIANS

Every member of the band is a master musician, capable of doubling on anything from a bugle to a bassoon. Thus apart from their imposing repertoire of band selections they can transmute themselves at a moment's notice into a modern dance orchestra or concentrate on strings and reeds.

Lieut. Dunn, himself, is one of the leading violinists in the United Kingdom. Before his appointment as director of the band in 1931, at the age of twenty-two, he played first violin with the British Broadcasting Corporation's famous symphony orchestra. His deputy, Band Sgt. J. K. G. Hamilton, is also a noted soloist.

The Royal Marine Band, under that name, is a comparatively modern institution. Since 1664, when the fife and drum were more commonplace, the marines have played a prominent role in the musical history of the services. It was not until 1923, however, that the old Royal Marine Light Infantry Band and the Royal Marine Artillery Band were dissolved and reorganized as the Royal Marine Band. It is now divided into three divisions with headquarters at Portsmouth, Plymouth and Chatham.

First director of the new Portsmouth unit was R. P. O'Donnell, now a squadron leader and director of the Air Force Band. His brothers were respectively in charge of the Plymouth and Chatham bands at the same time.

QUEEN VICTORIA'S CHOICE

Throughout her reign, Queen Victoria showed a particular preference for the Royal Marine Light Infantry Band, with the result it was commanded to play at most of the more important Royal functions. It performed at Royal garden parties, at Ascot, and frequently was given the honor of entertaining visiting royalty. Down through the years it has shared the limelight with other leading service bands at coronations, national celebrations, and more recently at the Armistice Day service in Whitehall.

Commemorating its selection for the 1911 Durbar trip, the band is entitled to wear a distinctive cap badge. This is a gilt grenade on which is mounted the Royal cypher "G.V.R." and a crown in silver surrounded by a gilt laurel wreath. The Royal Cypher in silver is also worn by all ranks on the helmet plate, over the anchor and below the plate.

GOLD AND SCARLET

The smart ceremonial uniform worn by the bandsmen is one of the most striking of the various service units. The close-fitting tunic of navy blue is trimmed with scarlet facings and gold braiding, with the "Royal Yacht" badge on the shoulder. A broad red stripe runs down the leg-seam of the trousers which match the tunic in colour. There are plenty of brass buttons to keep the boys busy when they are not rehearsing.

When the Repulse anchors off Quebec on May 15, the band will appear on deck in its full ceremonial dress, but according to present plans it will not accompany Their Majesties ashore. A programme has not yet been arranged for the band while it is awaiting the return of the King and Queen from their transcontinental tour, but it is certain arrangements will be made for its public appearance in a number of Eastern centres.

ington, W.Va., was rising at the rate of .3 feet an hour. United States Meteorologist W. C. Deveraux, at Cincinnati, forecast a general crest of forty-six feet from Huntington to Carrollton, Ky., by Sunday or Monday. The river rose above fifty feet here.

NO SERIOUS THREAT

The anticipated crest, unchanged throughout the day, was in contrast to the 79.99-foot level two years ago, when the devastating tide swept away homes and left 200 dead along the 981-mile course.

At Pittsburgh, earlier fears of a flood in the "Golden Triangle" area, confluence of the Monongahela, Allegheny and Ohio, were allayed as the weather bureau predicted a crest of twenty-six feet—one foot above flood.

Serious damage does not occur there until a stage of thirty feet is reached.

INTENSIFY EFFORTS AGAINST TERRORISM

Bricks were torn from the wall, but the blast failed to make an opening. No one was injured.

Police began a house-to-house search in the Irish section of the city.

WORKING TOGETHER

The Governments of Great Britain, Ireland and Northern Ireland were co-operating closely in a large-scale campaign to stamp out the outrages, which began January 16 with a series of eight explosions in England and Northern Ireland.

Intensified action followed explosions yesterday in two of London's subway centres in which seven persons were injured.

Two incidents today, one in Torquay on England's south coast and one in Slough, sent Scotland Yard experts rushing out of London in the belief that the terrorists had struck again.

An explosion wrecked the headquarters of the Torquay Conservative Club in Devonshire, but the first conclusion that it had been caused by a bomb was succeeded by a belief that it was due to an accidental ignition of gas.

FIRE AT SLOUGH

An early morning fire in an airplane parts factory at Slough was punctuated by a series of explosions, which Scotland Yard men finally decided were caused by bursting oil drums, rather than explosives.

Hundreds of visitors were turned away from the Houses of Parliament.

Sir Thomas Moore, a Conservative member of the House of Commons, announced he would propose legislation for inflicting corporal punishment on persons convicted of bombing charges.

Police leaves in London were canceled, keeping nearly 10,000 men on duty.

Revolvers were issued to police in Bristol after receipt of a threat to blow up big gasoline tanks in that important west coast port. Special guards were placed over docks.

Fianna Fail (Government party) Clubs throughout County Donegal, Ireland, appealed to Prime Minister de Valera to send Ireland's army to the border of Northern Ireland "as a gesture of encouragement to our fellow Nationalists on the other side."

The clubs also asked that the show of military strength be made as a protest against the arming of special constabulary in Northern Ireland.

COMMENTS APPROVED

The communique said the council approved Mussolini's comments on salient points in Ciano's report and then passed the following order:

"The Grand Council of Fascism expressed profound satisfaction for the address delivered by the Fuehrer on the sixth anniversary of his accession to power, in which he reaffirmed the political, ideological and military solidarity which unites the two Fascist and National Socialist (Nazi) revolutions to the future of the two peoples."

The council also issued this statement:

"The Grand Council of Fascism, meeting on the day in which, with the occupation of Gerona, all of Catalonia is now liberated from barbarous Bolshevist oppression, sends its ardent greetings to the heroic Spanish warriors and (Italian) Legionnaires, the solid factors in the victory, and makes known to all that the volunteer forces of Fascism will not abandon the struggle before it has ended, as it must end, with Franco's victory."

QUESTIONS SINCERITY

The controlled Italian press brushed aside President Roosevelt's denial of reports that he had said America's frontier was on the Rhine or in France by questioning its sincerity.

Newspapers called the denial tardy, and took the view that it was prompted by an uproar of criticism in the United States which they said the President now was attempting to quell for political reasons.

Fascist commentators asserted that, whether Roosevelt did or did not tell the United States Senate military affairs committee on Tuesday that the American frontier lay some place in Europe, such a view was in line with his policies—which were regarded here as anti-Fascist.

Continuation of such policies, they said, would mean that Italy, Germany and Japan would have to take "defence measures," repeating that their frontier would be the Panama Canal.

There was no indication when Italy would reply to yesterday's request by United States Ambassador William Phillips for an explanation of bitter, personal attacks in the press against President Roosevelt.

Senators Demanding Release Be Granted From Secrecy Pledge

Conflict of Opinion as to Possibility of Reconciling President Roosevelt's Confidential Talk With Later Expression of Foreign Policy

WASHINGTON, Feb. 4 (AP).—Senator Clark (Democrat, Missouri) added his support today to a Republican demand that United States Senate military committeemen be permitted to tell their versions of what President Roosevelt said when he discussed foreign policies with them at the White House on Tuesday.

The Missourian said he was in sympathy with such a proposal, made by Senator Bridges (Republican, New Hampshire), after President Roosevelt yesterday told the press things he had said—and had not said—and enunciated a foreign policy.

DIFFERENT OPINIONS

Senator Gurney (Republican, South Dakota) also said he was "absolutely in accord" with Bridges' demand, but Senator Johnson (Democrat, Colorado), observed that he thought the whole discussion was "beside the point now."

It was clear today that there was a conflict of opinion among some committee members as to whether this press conference statement could be reconciled with the impression they took away from Tuesday's meeting.

One Democratic member, who declined to permit his name to be used, said he could readily see how President Roosevelt might have been discussing at the conference the detailed methods by which he proposed to carry out the broad programme enunciated yesterday and that some of his hearers might not have understood this.

NO RECORD KEPT

Some of the committeemen had suggested that, to clear up the matter, a stenographic record of what the President had said be made public. They said they understood one had been made.

However, Stephen Early, White House press secretary, said today no record was kept. He added that it was contrary to White House practice to keep stenographic records of any conference of the kind.

Some sentiment appeared to be developing among committeemen and others in the Senate that discussion of the Tuesday conference had best be dropped.

Senator Johnson said he thought there was "little use wasting time."

"Irrespective of what the President said at the Tuesday meeting, and, mind you, I am not saying what he said, his foreign policy is that which he set forth yesterday. Congress must accept that and proceed under it," Johnson declared.

CONTINUE ATTACK

BERLIN, Feb. 4 (AP).—The controlled German press tonight kept up its campaign against President Roosevelt. The gist of newspaper comment was that the President—despite his denials of statements attributed to him on foreign policy—was continuing an anti-German, anti-Italian course.

Propaganda Minister Paul Joseph Goebbels' newspaper Der Angriff said: "Roosevelt in no wise took back what he said about America's readiness to throw her instruments of force into the scales in favor of Britain and France against the totalitarian states in event of war."

Hudson River In Winter's Icy Grip

Huge floes, stretching almost from shore to shore, are pictured passing under the graceful Bear Mountain Bridge. Traffic in the river was brought to a halt.

ACCUSED HAS LONG RECORD

George Newman to Serve Year and Two Months on Narcotic Charge

Charged with possession of morphine, George Newman pleaded guilty in the city police court yesterday, and was sentenced by Magistrate Henry C. Hall to serve one year in prison at hard labor and to pay a fine of $200. In default of payment, he was ordered to serve an additional two months.

Constable Douglas Bone told the court he arrested Newman on the southwest corner of Rupert Street and Heywood Avenue at 11:15 o'clock last Wednesday. He was accompanied by Constable Thomas Banister. The constable produced a hypodermic syringe, a tube of morphine and a metal case found in possession of the accused.

MANY CONVICTIONS

Claude L. Harrison, city prosecutor, read a list of twenty-seven previous convictions against the accused for vagrancy, possession of drugs, theft, fraud and shoplifting, dating back to May 25, 1915.

"It does not do me any good to send me to jail. It's only a burden to taxpayers," Newman stated when asked if he had anything to say.

An order will be made on Monday for the return of the stolen articles, alleged to have been taken from the automobile of Dr. F. M. Bryant.

CRASHES WRONG DOOR AT POSTOFFICE THEN CALMLY LEAVES NAME

A bearded gentleman yesterday afternoon caused quite a commotion in the lobby of the Postoffice here when he attempted to get out of the building through a door marked "In." This door, one of two at the south end of the lobby, can only be opened from the outside.

Walking up to the door, the man gave it a slight push. The door stayed closed. Backing off a few feet, he took a run at the door. The door still stayed closed. Backing off again, a little further this time, he charged the door, finally breaking through.

Then, standing on the threshold, he calmly gave his name and address to Postoffice employees.

AMATEUR CLUB HOLDS BANQUET

Short Wave Group Observes Tenth Anniversary—Many Attend

More than 100 members and guests of the Victoria Short Wave Club, Inc., gathered in Spencer's dining-room last evening for the tenth anniversary banquet. Amateur operators from Seattle, Vancouver, Parksville and Campbell River joined the local club in celebrating ten years of progress in the transmitting field.

R. J. Tate, president, welcomed visitors and mentioned the fact that the club was steadily increasing in membership. The beginners' class, which is held every Wednesday in the new clubhouse, has proved very popular, he said, and will assist many new club recruits.

Clarence Ferris acted as master of ceremonies, and introduced the guests, as well as outstanding club members. John Lawrence, who founded the group ten years ago, congratulated the members on the building of the new clubhouse and spoke briefly on how amateur operators promoted amicable relations between different nations. A. Westley, from Seattle, invited local members to attend a convention of short wave enthusiasts in Yakima this August.

USE IN ARMY

W. Borrowman, recently-appointed superintendent of radio, extended congratulations to the group. Archie Miller, district signalling officer at Work Point, gave a short address on short wave radio operations in the army. He declared "hams" would be indispensible on the coast of British Columbia and in the Interior in the event of hostilities. In thanking Mr. Miller, Mr. Tate said he hoped the Government would make a move to band the amateur operators together, as they had done in the United States, to render voluntary assistance.

Announcement of a long distance contest, open to club members, for a cash prize, was made by the president. Awards were also made to R. Hough and Ernest Cooper, first and second-place winners, respectively, of the recent DX contest.

Presentations were made to Mr. and Mrs. Harry Cooper for their assistance to the club, and Mrs. J. Cunningham. Entertainment was provided by Yorkie, ventriloquist, and John McLaren and Dal Le Marquand.

He will speak on the "Pollination of Tree Fruits." The monthly competition will be a pot of bulbs and three leeks.

DRIVERS' TESTS ARE CONTINUING

In Victoria Area 1,100 Motorists Pass Police Review During First Week

Approximately 1,100 motorists in the Greater Victoria area passed their tests in the first week of official examinations here under the Provincial Motor Licence Branch, Inspector G. A. Hood said yesterday. The percentage of repeaters was small. Examining staffs expressed appreciation of the degree of co-operation shown in the initiation of the plan.

On the Mainland, 3,750 motorists had taken the tests in Vancouver, and 1,275 in New Westminster, up to January 31. For two days in the same period, 418 motorists were examined here, making a total of 5,443 applications up to the end of last month.

CONTINUE TESTS

The first week of the Victoria tests passed without hitch. Waiting benches, ordered from the carpenter's shop for examining rooms, were installed, obviating standing queues mentioned earlier in the week. Next week the tests will proceed, with offices at the Menzies Street quarters open from 9 a.m. until 9 p.m., between Monday and Friday, inclusively, and up until 5 p.m. on Saturday.

By the end of February traveling testing equipment will be sent out throughout the Fraser Valley, Vancouver Island, and elsewhere. Inspector Hood indicated. In all, there are 120,000 drivers to examine, so that completion of the task will require some time.

How to Overcome Piles And Rectal Soreness

If you are annoyed with itching piles or rectal soreness, do not neglect the same or run the risk of an operation. Any itching, soreness or painful passage of stool, is nature's warning, and proper treatment should be secured at once. For this purpose get from MacFarlane and Vancouver Drug Stores, or any druggist, a package of Hemroid and use as directed. This formula, which is used internally, quickly relieves the itching and soreness and aids in healing the sore, tender spots. Hemroid is a physician's prescription and is highly recommended. It is easy to use and it seems the height of folly for anyone to risk an operation when a simple remedy, which is so pleasant to use, may be had at such a reasonable cost. (Advt.)

UNEMPLOYMENT

Unemployment has been entrenched in the country's life for eight years. The present Government at Ottawa gained power largely on a promise to regard the condition as of primary importance, and with a determination to find a solution. Through its three to four years of office it has proceeded from one makeshift expedient to another, and each and all constitute little more than relief. The programme before the present session of Parliament does not add anything constructive to what is already in progress in providing relief for unemployment. It fails to deal with the basic factors of the problem. More work, provided by Government, will be available because this is the year of a general election. The Toronto Globe and Mail says that in the programme "vision is absent. Security for individuals and industry is not included in the plans."

The Government at Ottawa, as well, indeed, as Provincial Governments, appears to look to private industry to find the solution of unemployment. That is where the solution lies, but those Governments are proceeding on a course of such wanton expenditures as to make it difficult for industries to look to the future with security, and, therefore, they are afraid to expand. The fact of the matter is that industry is doing what it can under the stress of governmental meddling and in the face of an intolerable burden of taxation. The Government's review of the employment situation shows 78,000 more wage-earners in employment for eleven months of 1938 than in the same period in 1936, but 66,000 fewer than in 1937. That means that, allowing for natural increase in population, there is no improvement in the situation; possibly even it is worse.

The Government holds out no promise of relief from the present excessive taxation. It continues to face unbalanced budgets. The fact is that leadership is absent. It is easy to understand how unemployment can persist in older established countries whose resources are limited. Canada is a new country, just on the threshold of its career. It has the resources. Lord Tweedsmuir, after his visit to Northwestern Canada, said that there were greater riches there awaiting adventurous development than in Northern Russia, and yet in the latter area there are 150,000 persons engaged blazing business trails. The Toronto Globe and Mail asks: "Why is no comprehensive survey being made of the great Northern potentialities, on which we must rely for more jobs for more young men? Why is the country not being opened up to keep pace with the new synthetic age? Germany can create numberless new products out of a paucity of raw materials. Canada has forests, minerals, clays lying idle in unknown abundance and water-power in untold quantities, material for thousands of industries and products without number. And we are struggling with expedients to keep idle people from starving. The temporary measures are serviceable to a point. They fail to stir imagination. They provide no inspiration. They do not even rescue manhood from the road to deterioration. The real job has still to be tackled."

SUSPICION

It is possible that the bondage of fear now holding in thrall so many hearts is caused by the characteristics of that legalism which, more and more, is staying the course of human liberty. Again and again in the annals of time the forces are deployed on the old battlefield in an engagement that never really ceases in the soul of mankind. It is the contest between faith and fear, between freedom and slavery, a contest that affects individual and social life, and that inevitably leaves its mark on both the institutions and the policies of nations. The fear so evident in the world today is of a dual character, having relation both to economic necessity and political developments. Important as is the material environment of man, it does not determine finally the character of human life. It is spiritual victory or defeat that makes this character. There is no fear where there is the assurance in the heart of the power to triumph over all events and circumstances in the security of an acknowledged sonship to a living God.

There is a large element of humanity in this age bowing the knee to the supremacy of the economic cause, surrendering to what is believed to be a materialistic interpretation of history. This explains dictatorships; it explains, too, how even in the most freedom-loving nations there is a certain unwillingness to exercise that moral restraint which is the price of the liberty they crave. They permit their governments to become more and more their masters, and as that happens they rely less on themselves to find their way through the tangled problems of personal and social life. The more they depend on others, and particularly upon the State, the more fear will enter into their hearts. They cease, in proportion, to trust the Captain of their salvation; they are renouncing not only the blessings of material freedom, but those of spiritual freedom as well. To them the social order is everything, and nothing else matters. That is why there is fear in their hearts. As a writer has put it: "The social order has never manifested the Spirit of Christ as that Holy Spirit has been manifested in the lives of the saints and of many a faithful Christian. But if the contribution made to social well-being by Christians who have learned how to serve their fellow-men in love were to be withdrawn, human society would be deprived of its deepest source of renewal and inspiration, like a land gone barren through the drying up of its fountains of living water."

Fear is inspired by a suspicion that something baleful is going to happen. It is suspicion that destroys the warmth of a common humanity, that prevents anything great, or generous, or noble, living in such an atmosphere. It was suspicion that was the rampant characteristic of the French Revolution, bringing atheism in its train, that "foul, unnatural vice, foe to all the dignity and consolation of mankind." Suspicion lies at the root of present discontent everywhere. It is due to so many examining other people's motives instead of confining themselves to an examination of their own, and it is undoubted that those who impute unworthiness to others do so because they are conscious of some unworthiness in themselves. Suspicion never has any place among those who are intent on building up a fellowship of mutual service in the interests of the Kingdom of God. He who trusts and is not suspicious is never afraid of what may befall, provided that trust is in the Omnipotent, for then the passing show of earth is weighed in the balance with the Eternal. First place is given to spiritual values, which forever overcome whatever may be harmful in the powers and principalities of earth.

What we know about ourselves should be the monition to refrain from judging others. There are secrets in every life; there are mixed motives; there are dark thoughts; there are meannesses of conduct. Those so handicapped in human conduct may have as well much that is good, desires towards the true and the pure, and they may have been the medium of friendly and disinterested service to others. They can have qualities of moral ability. It should be then a matter of fair play for each person to allow for the possibility of such reserves of virtue in others, instead of condemning them for acts and utterances that may be no more venal than his own. Where there is suspicion and condemnation there is no friendliness. Censoriousness does not accord with such a state. It is suspicion of each other's motives that breeds hostility between nations. Christianity seeks to make the best of people, being willing to await the final judgments that are rendered by the Supreme Tribunal, by the All-Knowing and the All-Loving, and by the All-Merciful as well.

The motive of Christianity is inspired by the desire to extend the Kingdom in response to the assurance of God's love for all. That in itself, where it becomes the guiding desire, removes suspicion and fear. Christianity, too, has patience as a dominant motive, and, therefore, has nothing to do with the impatience nurtured by distrust. There is a lesson in this religion for both national life and international relations, not only for the removal of suspicion and fear, but as well for the exercise of the supreme need of patience. Lord Rosebery in his "Life of Pitt" records a conversation on the quality required in a Prime Minister. One participant said "eloquence"; another said "knowledge." Pitt himself defined that quality as "patience." He was right, and it is a quality, too, that is required in the exercise of man's relationship with his fellows. It is the king of virtues, and where it reigns in the hearts of those willing to await the working out of the Divine destiny it becomes an asset that wipes away all suspicion and fear. Its exponent then can make his contribution to the stability and moral grandeur of a nation and as a citizen of the world, in the knowledge that "I can do all things through Christ Who strengtheneth me."

American investigators have found that the color of the eyes affects the ability of motor car drivers, especially in driving at night. It is the light-eyed motorists who have the poorest vision. They are more sensitive to the glare of lights. Thus it seems, light blue and grey-eyed drivers are at a disadvantage compared with those who have dark brown or dark blue eyes. The advice given to light-eyed drivers is that they should exercise extra precautions at night and wear sunglasses when driving in the daytime. The tests being carried out in this Province at the present time do not take this factor into consideration.

To be thrown on one's own resources is to be cast on the very lap of fortune; for our faculties undergo a development, and display an energy, of which they were previously unsusceptible.—Franklin.

Note and Comment

By Sandham Graves

Quietly, almost imperceptibly, color has come to the movies. Another frontier has been crossed. "Sweethearts," a Technicolor film shown here last week, marked a tremendous dvance in the use of color on the screen. Probably it will do more than that. It is quite possible that "Sweethearts" will usher in color as a permanent attribute of screen plays. Histrionically, the picture was insignificant; color-wise it was outstanding. Color adds a further element of realism to the screen; takes it that much farther along the road towards duplicating life itself. There are still the flat, one-plane images; but the illusion of life is much closer than ever, in color. People today would not voluntarily go back to the silent film; however much the silence was appreciated. After a few more tomorrows, color on the screen will be here to stay. It is a little bright, perhaps a little too vivid, yet; but experience will cure that. Seeing "Sweethearts," one formed the impression that here was the birth of a whole new era for the films. It will no longer be the "silver screen," but a screen on which the colors of life itself will be flashed, with verisimilitude. If, from the screen, color enters more fully into our lives, that, too, will be a gain. It is a new frontier that has been reached, and crossed.

Radio has also overflowed its bounds in a chain of circumstances culminating last week in the assurance that static interference can be eliminated from broadcasts. If so, another new front will have been crossed. The case is more technical than clear at present. Recall, however, experiments conducted by Marconi wi ultra-short waves, where wave-lengths of one meter and up were found to be highly directional and peculiarly free from static. Wireless engineers will tell you that wave-length frequency and amplitude are bound together in an equation, where, if you vary one it will affect the others. To shorten the explanations, know that broadcast programmes have been carried to your set by two wave-lengths: one, the fixed carrier wave, and the other its slightly different companion, creating what is referred to as an audible beat. It was through the use of contrasting wave-lengths that audible sounds were re-created in the receivers. Ultra-short-wave wireless experiments, carried on simultaneously in several places after Marconi's death, have led to the belief that varying frequencies will give better result than varying wave-lengths. In other words, we are beginning to work seriously with a different component of the same equation. At two points on this continent announcements were made last week claiming successes along this line. Both may yet have to be proved. The claim, however, is that in eliminating static man may also achieve a purity of tone quite unknown in the ordinary commercial broadcasts of today. There may be a further benefit. Ultra-short waves, anywhere between one and five meters, afford nearly limitless scope for a multiplicity of stations, each free from interference with one another. So, overnight as it were, you may have static-free broadcasts; tone-pure broadcasts, and broadcasts so isolated in the ether that they will not tangle in your receivers. At present it is a case to be proved; but the proof seems to be coming up.

It is a habit, and an unthinking one, to say that scientific and technological advances are destroying man. I do not believe that. I believe that man could quite easily destroy himself, but I do not think he will do so. Each new frontier crossed means an enlargment of known opportunities, if we are of the mind to use our opportunities. Motion pictures have created a great many jobs. So has radio. The airplane brought in a new and universal ocean in the skies, with tremendous changes on the ground. Man may contract his frontiers, and die; or enlarge them, and live. I believe that he will choose the latter course. The physical appurtenances of life have all been a forward progression. It is only man himself that has retrogressed, and then briefly; each true surge carrying him forward to a greater height. Color movies, static-free radio, and such developments do not mean much of themselves; but, taken together, they are part of something that is alive, and not dead, in man. The Earth at least is there, if we will but learn how to possess it. And, do you know, I think that we shall!

To date, some 150 violating pedestrians have refused police their names. As many others gave phoney—or funny—names. One woman sat in the middle o. Santa Monica Boulevard, tied up traffic ten minutes, and defied officers to arrest her.

Glancing Over Sport

Do you know that members of Kate Smith's New York Celtics, world's professional basketballers, are playing to bumper crowds on their present tour and are averaging something like $200 per player a week? Turn Off the Heat

For a long time now we have been looking forward to the advent of Spring—not so much because we dislike cold weather, but because we do dislike the unhealthy overheating of buildings that is so common during the Winter. It would be all right if all buildings could be heated to a uniform temperature, consistent with the Winter clothing that one needs to wear on the streets. But the trouble is that most stores, restaurants and meeting rooms are heated to Summer temperatures, making Winter clothes extremely irksome. An aversion to fresh air seems to be pretty general, too. Frankly we're thoroughly fed up with stuffy, over-heated, under-ventilated rooms that must be a a splendid breeding place for cold germs.—R.M.

Wants Spots Marked

Why don't they (the delightfully impersonal "they") mark the fact of some of the illustrious ones having in early days lived in Victoria. This is the question that has been propounded and is hereby passed on to the public which undoubtedly embraces "they." The suggester of the move offered the opinion that a simple monument detailing the facts connected with the spot so marked was all that would be required. In passing the informant instanced the former home of David Belasco, who later made a great name in connection with the stage and which appropriately was just off Fort Street in the vicinity of the theatre centre of the present day. Another instance was that of the home in James Bay occupied by Lady Franklin, who spent some time here awaiting news from the ill-fated voyage of her husband in the Arctic regions. Another name mentioned was that of Henry George, who, as a young fellow, came to Victoria during the gold rush and who worked in a store on Johnson Street, and who later became famous for his economic theories and writings in the United States. And there are many others.—O.H.N.

WOMEN'S WORKROOM

Sir,—During the last six months of 1938, the donations of material and used clothing on which we have depended for augmenting the income of the Women's Workroom, have been very few indeed. I am convinced that is due to a misunderstanding on the part of many kind friends, and with your permission, will state our financial position.

It is difficult to budget accurately for our wages. A subcommittee thoroughly investigates every application, but no woman, if eligible and in real need of work, is refused admittance. Consequently, our numbers fluctuate, but basing my figures on the payroll for 1938, our income is derived as follows: 40 per cent from the municipalities of Greater Victoria and 30 per cent from the Community Chest, leaving 30 per cent to be made up by sales in workroom and shop, and small cash donations.

The cheques from the municipalities are for women on direct relief and are issued by us in wages, very often before we receive them, as each worker is paid in cash at the end of her shift, and naturally, as there are various wage sheets to be filled in, civic authorities cannot settle with us daily. This, in itself, constitutes a temporary drain on our bank balance. The Community Chest's contribution and our own profits pay the remainder of the wages, and supervisors' salaries, also our fuel, light, telephone, shop rent and incidental expenses. Thanks to the continued generosity of Mr. R. H. B. Ker, the workroom premises are rent free.

The question may be asked, Why not apply to the Community Chest for a larger grant? Our answer is that as a committee responsible for the spending of other people's money, we feel that it is our duty to be as far as possible self-supporting. The purpose of our organization is to give women work; they must have material to work on, but if every bit of this were to be bought, we should operate at a loss, liberal as the stores are in the matter of discount. And it must be remembered that, with a few exceptions, we are not employing expert sempstresses, but women who are untrained or unfit for other work.

We are in need of any kind of used clothing, cretonnes, muslins, odd bits of silk and satin, discarded silk stockings and under clothes. Old evening and afternoon dresses can be sold in the shop; men's trousers which are too worn for any other purpose will make short pants for little boys. Nothing that comes to us is wasted, and periodically we distribute bundles of mended garments to one of the municipal relief centres. We also take orders for mending, darning and recovering elderdowns, and I can vouch from personal experience that these are beautifully done.

I hope very much that this appeal will meet with a ready response from people who sympathize with our efforts to pay our own way, as far as lies in our power.

E. FRANCES MORKILL,

LIBERALS' FOREIGN POLICY

Sir,—A Liberal member of our Senate says that if Canada was at war, and not England, he doubts if England would come to her help. How an intelligent gentleman can make such a statement, except as a cover up for the Liberal weak foreign policy, one cannot imagine.

When one reads in not only English but Canadian papers of England warship building today it is certain that country is as strong, if not more so, than Germany and Italy, and by the end of this year Japan included. Considering the understanding of France and England coming to one another's help if attacked, the French Navy is stronger than Italy's is, and so leaves England a surplus of ships to protect trade routes and the independent Dominions.

Why has she spent $20,000,000 on Singapore's naval defence? Not to defend China but to be strong in the Pacific so as to help to protect South Africa and Australia, and also the Pacific Coast of Canada. If one studies mileage it is seen that the distance from Singapore to Australia and Canada is about the same, and Singapore is also near to the base of the only nation that could or would attack us. Surely the gentleman reads his paper and can work it out for himself. In Herr Hitler's speech of today he does not speak of any occasion for war, but he says if Italy is at war he would help her, and consider the agitation in Italy on behalf of acquiring some of France's possessions. Herr Hitler can easily make Italy the goat to produce a war.—F. J. BRADLEY.

POLITICAL CRITICISM

Sir,—Since the Federal election may be held this year, there will, no doubt, be other pre-election utterances like those of Mr. J. S. Taylor (Ind., Nanaimo), as published in The Colonist of February 1, from an address given by him the previous night in Ottawa. Ancient political subterfuge such as "I have nothing against him but his methods for securing votes are despicable," etc.

It is rather difficult to know just where Mr. J. S. Taylor stands politically. As a C.C.F. candidate he was elected and sent to Ottawa in the last Federal election from this constituency. In the above-mentioned news item he states that he is a Socialist, and Independent follows his name. It was rumored that he had offered himself to the Liberal party some time ago.

Mr. Taylor mentions briefly "the great number, if not the majority of Canadians, suffering from unnecessary poverty in a rich and fertile country." If one of Mr. Taylor's aims has been to do all he could for the betterment of the unemployed during his term in Ottawa, it certainly is not generally known.

Credit is generally always given where credit is due, and that includes Mr. Taylor had not objected to this man getting credit for everything done in the constituency, even when it resulted from his own efforts," in referring to the "defeated Liberal candidate," Mr. Alan Chambers. Further, in regard to Mr. Alan Chambers, it is generally considered that he is a young man of outstanding ability and brilliance, and one endowed with that quality and understanding of the people's problems that would insure competent representation in any legislative body.

EARL NELSON.

Sandwich Island Cable—The schooner Triumph, Captain Dan McLean, will leave for Vancouver in about ten days to convey the Sandwich Island cable to its destination. The cable is now en route from the East via the C.P.R. and measures about forty miles in length. It will be used to connect the Sandwich Islands group by telegraph. The Triumph will also be engaged to lay the cable, and will be about two months in completing the task. She will probably return with a load of fruit, cocoanuts, etc.

The new steamer is of 1,926 tons register, and has a carrying capacity of 4,000 tons cargo, besides fuel, etc. The new steamer is especially adapted for the service, and will no doubt give every satisfaction.

Port Angeles Property—The Victoria syndicate formed last week to dispose of lots in Port Angeles opened their sale books on Friday last, and have already disposed of a large number of lots. It is expected that all the lots controlled by the syndicate will be sold this week.

Flower Arrangement Is Popular Subject Of Illustrated Talk

Mrs. Constance Spry, of London, England, Addresses Big Audience at Empress Ballroom, Giving Fine Lantern Slide Demonstration

THE loveliness of flowers as decorative material had a most eloquent exponent here yesterday in Mrs. Constance Spry, of London, England, who spoke to a big audience at the Empress Hotel ballroom on the subject of "Flower Arrangement."

Famous in her own particular field, Mrs. Spry surpassed all expectations by the presentation of her subject, giving logical reasons for every statement and clinching her argument in favor of suggested ideas by showing scores of enchanting colored lantern-slides of various flower and leaf arrangements. The most exotic and the most commonplace alike were shown to have their uses. While the most glorious hot-house blooms were given their due recognition, they were often found in combination with such things as kale, small green oranges and tomatoes, purple damsons, chestnut burrs, poppy heads, blue cabbage, seed pods, dock-leaves, grapes, hops, blackberries, dried fern leaves, wheat and oats.

DISMISS CONVENTIONS

Early in her talk, Mrs. Spry revealed that she was definitely uninfluenced by conventional rules for flower arrangement. Flower arrangement should, she maintained, be an expression of one's feeling for color and line. Flowers today were definitely accepted as decorative material, and the rules of an older day no longer held.

"For example, there is no rule today against the mixing of hot-house and wild flowers in the same arrangement. That would not at one time have been allowed. The sole criterion in flower combination today is that the flowers, whether two, three, five or more, should have something in common, whether by force of contrast or in direct sympathy, in texture, color, shape or some other quality," she told the audience.

For an initial guiding principle in arranging flowers for some specific room, Mrs. Spry suggested the selection of some feature in the room that could be accented.

"Echo the curtains, bring out a contrast to the color of the walls, reproduce some highlight of a picture in the room," she suggested. In this connection, she recalled a very successful arrangement of flowers in every shade of red she had on one occasion used in a hall where one of the principal pictures was of a huntsman in red coat.

AVOID STUNTING

Although lifted from their context, some of her own combinations might be mistaken for straining after effect, Mrs. Spry definitely warned her audience against the use of any material in order to secure an original flower arrangement.

"Any form of stunting in flower arrangement should be discouraged," she said.

One of the most popular errors in flower arrangement was the mixing of gypsophila with sweet peas. Gypsophila was airy, misty, greyish and the most effective use she had ever made of it was when she placed an armful in a large fish bowl set before a silvery grey mirror that reemphasized all these qualities.

Another common mistake at one time was for one to make a hobby of some particular flower in decorative arrangements. This might not suit the room. On the other hand no flower or leaf, no color or shape or texture of growing things should be dismissed from the mind as unsuitable material. The argument was repeatedly justified in the glorious flower arrangements pictured. And in a few words Mrs. Spry was able to indicate the intrinsic in the character of flower or leaf that made either just the inevitable thing for heightening the beauty of a combination.

CONTAINERS

The importance of containers was touched upon. These ranged from the most beautiful Dresden bowls to basins of simple pottery; English garden baskets, and pots, these in some instances tinted by means of a simple and easily applied wash to match the blue of hydrangea, or the pink of snapdragon contained therein.

"We use a great deal of bare branches, yellow willow, dogwood, branches with grey lichen on them. They are useful often to give height or width, or to bring out some character or contrast in an arrangement," she said at one point.

The beauty of leaf arrangements or combinations was eloquently demonstrated in several pictures. The miniature arrangement was also shown. Small flowers need not necessarily be used in such.

Several beautiful table arrangements were included. To illustrate the possibilities of the unconventional container, Mrs. Spry showed a picture of a table where mother-of-pearl shells were used for vases, each filled with a different colored nasturtium. A particularly attractive table was a low circular arrangement of cabbage roses encircling high candlesticks. In an apple green bowl, in another arrangement, she showed vivid red flowers, and, in a blue bowl, hydrangeas combined with dahlias.

Mrs. H. P. Hodges introduced the speaker. Mrs. Bland, president of the Business and Professional Women's Club, which sponsored Mrs. Spry's visit, presiding.

VISITORS HIT WITH REFUSE

As fast as the disturbers could be arrested and arraigned they were sentenced each to ten days in jail on charges of disorderly conduct and inciting the populace.

GIVEN STERN WARNING

Authorities ordered all subordinate officials sternly to prevent further infractions of "Panama's traditional hospitality" during the visit of the Italian ships.

Yesterday the Anti-Fascist League petitioned Mayor C. M. Ossa for permission to hold a demonstration. The mayor refused and the governor upheld the mayor.

During the night, stickers bearing such phrases as "Death to Mussolini; viva Roosevelt" and "Down with Franco and the slayers of women and children," were pasted on billboards, walls, curbs and telephone poles.

J. R. Clark's English Setter Carries Off Top Honors At Shrine Hall

J. R. Clark's English setter, Jay R.C., captured top honors in the first parlor show of 1939 held by the Victoria City Kennel Club last night in the Shrine Hall when it was judged the "best in the show" after some keen competition from other handlers. Close to 150 dogs of various breeds were benched and good crowds attended both the children's session in the afternoon and the main show in the evening.

An unusual co-incident took place during the day for the setter, Jay R.C., also carried off premier honors at the children's event. It was under the pet name of Michael and was handled by Beverley Clark, daughter of the owner, who looked after it in the evening under its pedigreed name.

GT. BRITAIN ASKED TO BE MEDIATOR

be opened with three points enunciated by Negrin on Wednesday as the background.

Then Negrin told the Cortes (parliament) at Figueras that the Government's aims were:

1. A guarantee of independence for Spain and freedom from foreign influence.

2. A government desired by the people, as shown by plebiscite.

3. Liquidation of the war without persecution to permit all Spaniards to join in the country's reconstruction.

There was no indication at Burgos of Franco's reaction to the Spanish Government's move. Some diplomats believed the insurgent leader would balk at negotiating on such a broad basis, particularly in view of his military successes.

PLIGHT GROWS WORSE

Franco's troops—conquerors of the important city of Gerona this morning—smashed steadily northward toward the French frontier. They were quickly cutting away the little Catalonian territory left in Government control.

Negrin and his ministers had left for "somewhere in Catalonia" while minor officials crossed into France with the Government's records. One report had the Government leaders planning to fly to Valencia to set up a new capital.

TURNED INTO ROUT

Figueras, where 150 persons were believed killed and 200 wounded in an insurgent air raid yesterday, was bombarded again late today by seven planes.

First estimates were that a score were killed and many wounded in the latest attack.

Three other insurgent planes which bombed the Spanish towns of Aguilana and Darnius near the frontier swooped over the French village of Las Illas, but turned back when French anti-aircraft guns opened fire.

OVER THE BORDER

Two hours later three insurgent bombers flew over French territory near Cerbere, but swung back over Port Bou, on the Mediterranean, just across the frontier in Spain, when they were caught in a criss-cross of French army searchlights and a warning burst of anti-aircraft fire.

This trio bombed the outskirts of Port Bou and the refugee-filled coast road at San Miguel de Culbera. Reports were lacking on the number of casualties resulting from their raid.

STUDENTS SAIL FOR VANCOUVER

Rugby Goal Posts Taken as Souvenirs of Victory by Varsity Players

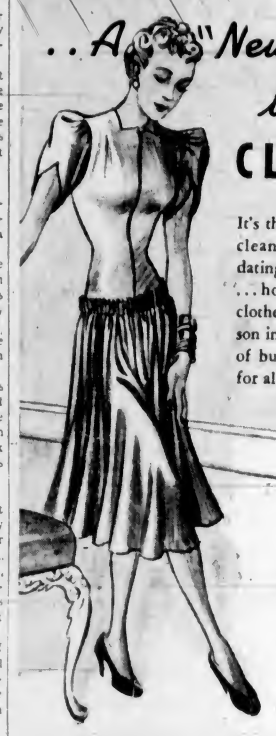

Varsity invasion of 1939 is over. Approximately 400 care-free students from the University of British Columbia sailed from Victoria aboard the Princess Norah late last night after an exciting day in the British Columbia Capital.

They carried home with them happy memories of another visit here, victories over Victoria's Crimson Tide and Victoria College in Rugby—and the goal posts from Macdonald Park, perhaps the most treasured souvenirs of the trip.

Turning in a great exhibition on the grassy surface at Macdonald Park, the Varsity senior ruggers trounced the Victoria "reps" 16-6, in a McKechnie Cup match that attracted more than 1,500 fans. On the lower pitch at the James Bay enclosure, U.B.C. defeated Victoria College 8-3.

On the losing end of the programme, Varsity dropped a 43-29 decision to the Victoria Dominoes in a basketball game, and went down to a 2-1 defeat at the hands of the Victoria Women's Grass Hockey Club in an exhibition match.

It was a great day for the young men and women from British Columbia's leading school of learning, and they certainly enjoyed their short stay. They'll be back in full force again in 1940.

Victoria Pro Has 81 in First Round at Phoenix—Leaders Card 68

PHOENIX, Ariz., Feb. 4 (AP).—Johnny Bulla, husky twenty-four-year-old Chicago professional, and Byron Nelson, veteran from Reading, Pa., carded 68's to lead a field of seventy-eight storm-tossed golfers at the conclusion of the first eighteen holes in the $3,000 Phoenix open tournament today.

Bulla, playing in a threesome with Barge Pease, Phoenix amateur, and Zell Eaton, Oklahoma City, Okla., figuratively burned up the rain-soaked course, which earlier had proved the undoing of some of the nation's leading linksmen.

The crowd on the verge of acclaiming Bulla when Nelson, member of the 1937 Ryder Cup team, pulled up to the eighteenth tee, with a 63. Informed he would have to par the five-stroke hole, Nelson nonchalantly went ahead to tie Bulla.

Par for the course is 71.

In the light of the majority of scores, Bulla's and Nelson's exhibitions were outstanding. Each shot five birdies.

VICTORIA TAKES HOCKEY FIXTURE

Playing on a heavy field, Victoria Women's Grass Hockey Club yesterday defeated visiting Varsity hockeyists, 2-1, in an exhibition game at the Victoria High School grounds. All of the goals were scored in the opening half.

The victory was the second straight for the locals, who last year turned back the visiting students, 4-1.

Victoria had the better of the play in the opening stanza, and the one-goal margin of the interval was a fair indication of the progress of the match. Sheila Swift and Betty Sheppard scored for the locals.

Trailing by a single goal as the final half opened, Varsity attacked for many minutes, but superb defensive work by the locals prevented scoring. Victoria made occasional raids into the visitors' territory, but could not improve their margin, and when the final whistle sounded the score was unchanged.

G. C. Grant, Victoria, refereed.

New York Squad Has Too Much Power for Leafs And Triumph 4-2

TORONTO, Feb. 4 (AP).—New York Rangers packed too much power for Toronto tonight and trimmed the Maple Leafs 4-2 in the first game of their home-and-home National Hockey League series. A crowd of 13,518 saw the Leafs lose their second game in succession.

The loss kept the Leafs bogged down in fourth place, while the Rangers moved within five points of the league-leading Boston Bruins.

Toronto opened the scoring in the first period, but the Rangers took command with a three-goal outburst in the second and never relinquished their lead.

fought snowstorms all the way up the mountain and how it was found impossible to bring back St. Andressay on an improvised stretcher.

FORCED TO ABANDON PLAN

He said the group then tried to rig up a home-made toboggan, but were forced to abandon this conveyance when it became apparent the affair might become stuck on the way down.

Snow in fourteen-foot drifts lay around the cabin, he said, and nights were bitterly cold. The party took turns sleeping beside the injured man to keep him warm. Through it all, White said, St. Andressay remained the "most cheerful of the lot," despite the fact he was weak and pale from loss of blood.

Finally, it became necessary for the two to return for assistance because food supplies were running low.

U. B. C. RUGGERS DEFEAT COLLEGE

Register 8-3 Triumph in Exhibition Rugby Match at Macdonald Park

Setting up a 5-0 lead at the breather and matching Victoria College's lone try in the final stanza, U.B.C. ruggers yesterday defeated the Collegians, 8-3, in an exhibition match played on the lower field at Macdonald Park.

College had a wide margin in the territorial play in the opening half, and kept the Thunderbirds hemmed in their own portion of the field for the greater part of the time, but could not get through for a score. In the final stanza the play was fairly evenly divided.

The first points of the hard-fought match came seconds before the half-time whistle, Richards going over following a smart backfield run by the Varsity ruggers. Robinson had no difficulty converting from directly in front of the posts.

Fighting doggedly, College gained their first and only try when Ritchie Williams took advantage of a forward dribble and planted the ball on the Thunderbirds' line. The attempted conversion failed.

Play stayed at midfield for many minutes before the visitors broke through for the final score of the game. Gaining possession from a tight scrum at centrefield, Varsity three-quarters ran the ball deep into College territory. From a subsequent line-out they crossed the opposing line for a try, Basil Robertson doing the scoring.

Referee, "Bud" Pangman, Victoria.

Honorary Patrons to Be Guests of Musical Arts

Lieutenant-Governor and Mrs. E. W. Hamber to Attend Programme of Canadian Folk Song at Empress Hotel Next Wednesday Evening

His Honor the Lieutenant-Governor and Mrs. E. W. Hamber will be the guests of honor next Wednesday evening, at the Empress Hotel, of the Victoria Musical Art Society, of which they are honorary patrons.

For the occasion a special programme, arranged round the theme of Canadian folk-song music, has been devised, and the happy device was hit upon of fitting the music into a play. A. M. D. Fairbairn, well-known for his play-writing talent, has prepared the picturesque little drama into which the songs are woven. This is the story of a prospector, a mining engineer, and an Indian Guide (to be impersonated by Alex. McGowan, Dr. Allon Peebles and Roy Shadbolt respectively), who by chance meet at an abandoned Hudson's Bay post. Their reminiscences about past days bring in memories of the ceremonial songs of Indians, the French voyageur and the early settlers from the British Isles, all of which will be heard in their proper places.

THE PROGRAMME

Following is the programme. It is understood that appropriate costumes will be worn.

Indian group, by Dudley Wickett and chorus: "Aguhlen Hagwuyaha" ("Stop This Idle Chatter") and "A Spirit Song," (with drum accompaniment), "Nadu-Nadudu" (lullaby), Minnie McCurdy.

French-Canadian songs:

English group:

(a) "Sally in Our Alley"; (b) "The Plough Boy," William Inglis and chorus.

Irish group:

(a) "My Love's an Arbutus"; (b) "Bendemeer's Stream," Patsy Swift and chorus.

Swedish group:

(a) "Spring Breezes Crisp"; (b) "When I Was Seventeen," Kathleen Lavell.

French-Canadian songs: "Le Petit ane," Keith Littler; and "l'Aviron," Elizabethan singers (Dudley Wickett, Jack Townsend, Dorothy Parsons and Phyllis Deaville).

Scottish songs:

(a) "Skye Boat Song" and "Tangle o' the Isles," Lily Wilson; and (b) "Auld Lang Syne," by entire company.

The programme has been convened by Betty Hetherington, assisted by Mrs. Allon Peebles. The Misses Vivienne Combe and Bobbie Thatcher have charge of the costumes. Others assisting with the programme are J. A. Dewar and George Cameron. Lighting effect will be special, also, in charge of L. Lamb.

The Misses Julia Kent Jones and Joy Berman, violinists, and Mrs. McCurdy, pianist, will be the accompanists.

Linen Shower to Be Held Soon in Aid of Solarium

THE Solarium W.A. is again making an appeal to the citizens of Victoria for support in the annual linen shower to be held on Thursday, Friday and Saturday of this week. In preceding years, the public has been very generous, and the donations have resulted in ample supplies of linen for the Solarium. Routine wear and tear have depleted the necessary stock, and once again the W.A. looks to its friends for donations. A special request is made this year for grey woolen blankets and pillows. Among other needs listed are towels, diapers, bath mats, draw sheets, cot sheets and table linen. Itemized lists of necessities, and baskets to receive donations, will be displayed at the Hudson's Bay Company, David Spencer, Ltd., and the Irish Linen Store this week. Samples of the needed linen will be on display, and members of the W.A. will be in attendance to give information.

LOVE COMES LAST

By Julie Anne Moore

CHAPTER I

Excitement rarely crept into Andy Cooper's deep lazy voice; but it was there now, suppressed but unmistakable. Laura Wiley detected it almost the moment he spoke her name over the wire and though she felt a sympathetic tingling, she sensed a threat of change and was suddenly troubled.

Andy said, casually—too casually: "Just received a wire from Bartley Ford, head of the Ford Advertising Agency in New York. You've heard me speak of him, Laurie. Guess what?"

Laura held her breath.

"He's due in town sometime tonight and he wants me to have lunch with him tomorrow."

"How nice."

To Laura at that moment Bartley Ford was no more than a symbol of something potentially unpleasant. Presently her imagination would conceive a human form, a face, a personality behind the two words; but even then the image on her consciousness would bear no resemblance to the dynamic and inordinately successful young man who bore the name.

"Big things may happen at that luncheon," Andy said. "For us, Laurie."

Change . . . She had suspected it . . now she knew. Resentment against the unknown Bartley Ford drew faint lines across her high white forehead; but there was no hint of this in her voice when she said, lightly: "You can tell me all about it while we're driving out to the lake, Andy. You'll be able to get away?"

Andy said he was leaving in ten minutes—and asked, "Is Nina going into the water?"

"Yes, of course."

"Well, I didn't know," Andy said. "Reeves seemed to think that heart of hers had its limitations."

"But I talked with Dr. Reeves last night," Laura told him, quickly. "He says there's really no point in telling her she mustn't do things other girls do. As long as she avoids excitement and undue exertion, he thinks it will be better to let her do as she likes."

Andy grunted. "He may be right, of course," he said—and suddenly: "Oh, say—it's just occurred to me: Bartley Ford may be able to do something for you, too, Laurie. He probably rides a private elevator into every radio studio in the country."

Only, Laura thought, with increasing uneasiness, she didn't want anything done for her. BRY was only a small city station, but she liked her work and was content to stay there. She was maintaining a home, taking care of Nina and finding ample time to write. And for almost two years Andy's quiet devotion had given her life a meaning without which it would have been a futile experience.

What more could she ask? Could Bartley Ford give her more than peace of mind and a well-founded sense of security? Could any change bring her greater happiness than she had known these last months?

Andy was wailing. She said, "We'll talk it over when you get here. Hurry, Andy . . ."

* * *

Nina stood at the head of the stairs, a swimming suit clutched in one hand. She was slim and fair like her older sister and, in a pale fragile way, almost as lovely. But just now her pretty face was curiously grave. She waited until Laura cradled the phone, then quietly sat on the top step and leaned back against the wall.

"Why don't you tell Andy to quit worrying about me and attend to his own business, Laurie?" she said.

Laura had turned toward the living-room, but now she wheeled.

"Oh, I know," Nina said impatiently. "You thought I was in my bedroom with the door closed."

Laura nodded, began to climb the stairs. "I'm sorry, darling."

"If Andy had his way, I'd spend the rest of my life in bed," Nina said. "He's an awful busybody."

"Andy is interested in you, Nina. He feels, as I do, that you aren't always as careful as you might be."

Nina scowled, petulantly. "What if I'm not. It's my business, not his." She drew the swimming suit across her legs and pulled at it nervously. Laura reached the top of the stairs and sat down. "Andy," she said gently, "is very fond of you. Otherwise he wouldn't care what you did."

Nina shrugged, then said, "Sometimes I almost wish my heart would stop and have it over with."

"Darling — you shouldn't think things like that."

"But I mean it. What's the sense in going on like this? Everybody in Newbury knows about my heart. I'm a condemned woman and you've no idea how often I'm reminded of it. Even the boys I go out with look on me as a risk."

"Nina—please."

"Why is it no boy ever goes out with me more than once or twice? Why" She left the question unfinished, folded her slim arms, met her sister's troubled gaze. "I'm not a baby any longer, Laurie," she said evenly. "I'm twenty-one, a woman. A woman with the average woman's makeup. I'm just as capable of love as you are. More so, I suspect, because you're more intelligent and less emotional than I am. As far as I know, I could bear children and have a home of my own and give a fairly good pretence of being a normal person. But I never will."

"Nina, you will. Don't you see—"

"I never will," Nina repeated firmly. "I may fall in love, but nothing will ever come of it. It would be unreasonable to expect a man to gamble against the possibility that some day he will come home to find his wife a corpse."

The dull ache in Laura's throat was like a physical obstruction. She said, fighting to hold her voice steady, "When the right man comes along, you will fall in love and have children and probably live to see your children choose husbands and wives for themselves. You must believe those things possible, Nina, because they are. They can be yours darling."

"No . . ." Nina's blonde head shook a thoughtful denial. "To let myself expect them—I mean really love a man . . ." Her hands rose in a quick, vague gesture, sank slowly. "I simply couldn't live through that, Laurie."

A silence fell, such a throbbing silence as had filled this house one night almost six years before. Nina's memory of it was distorted, no longer fresh; but Laura had forgotten not one small detail of their mother's passing. Now her mother's words came back to her as if they had been spoken only yesterday . . . "You're all Nina has now, Laura. She isn't strong. Be good to her . . ."

Nina stirred, restlessly, and her eyes lifted to her sister's lovely face. What she saw there brought sudden laughter to her lips and she cried out, "Oh, Laurie, why do you look like that? You know I have these morbid spells every so often. And I'm over this one. I really am, so cheer up."

MUSICAL MUSINGS

by HECTOR CHARLESWORTH

HECTOR CHARLESWORTH

Among recent releases of Victor Records, I note a welcome addition to the library of lighter compositions, an album "Gems from Jerome Kern's Musical Shows" (Concert Series, C-31), in six double discs. Owing to the vogue of more modernistic composers, less than justice has been done to the distinguished contribution Jerome Kern has made to public enjoyment. He has followed more traditional lines than devotees of syncopation and dissonance, but light opera has known no more charming melodist since the days of Sullivan. Assured immortality awaits "Old Man River" from "Showboat," the best example of American folk song produced in this century, and even in such a gay popular number as "Look for the Silver Lining," we have a melody so haunting that it will probably live. A dozen of Kern's operettas are represented in this album, and the whole makes a remarkable aggregate of joyous and original melody. The records were made by the Victor Light Opera Company, under Lawrence Joy, and the voices are in many instances so good that one regrets their anonymity.

As examples of beautiful recording, finer than anything attainable by radio transmission, I commend two records of German prima donnas. One (Red Seal, 15218) is of three songs including Brahms' "In Summer Fields," sung by Maria Muller, an exquisite lyric soprano who was at the Metropolitan ten years ago. The other is of two numbers from Mozart's "Marriage of Figaro" (Red Seal, 15178), sung by a truly glorious dramatic soprano, Tiana Lemnitz, who has not been heard in America. Few voices so lovely have been heard in our time. Progress in increasing the breadth of tonal beauty in orchestral records is demonstrated in a new series from "Tristan and Isolde" (Masterpiece Set, M 508), by Leopold Stokowski and the Philadelphia Orchestra. Especially enthralling is the "Love-Night" music from Act II, less well known than the "Prelude," and the "Love Death" also included.

The great tenor, Lauritz Melchior, in collaboration with Eugene Ormandy and the Philadelphia orchestra, is heard in three numbers from Wagner's "Parsifal" and "Lohengrin's Farewell" (Red Seal, 15212-15213). Melchior is unquestionably the foremost of living Wagnerian tenors, and these records give a very satisfying idea of his quality. With Stokowski the same orchestra is heard in transcriptions by the conductor of a Pavane and Gigue by the great Elizabethan, William Byrd (Red Seal, 1943). Stokowski has preserved the pristine charm of Byrd in the amplified tones of modern orchestration. Byrd's music is not very well known to the multitude, but these records show why his name has endured for 350 years. Two more records by the great harpsichordist, Yella Pessl, of sonatas by Domenico Scarlatti (Red Seal 1942), have been released. So rich is the recording that the tones are more appealing than in the average concert performance on this antique instrument.

Of a widely popular order are new recordings of Tschaikowsky's fiery "Overture, 1812," by Arthur Fiedler and the Boston "Pops" orchestra (Red Seal, 12411-2); and of Kreisler in his best form, playing the universal favorites, Tschaikowsky's "Andante Cantabile" and Dvorak's "Humoreszke." I cannot say that I am much impressed by a new duo piano arrangement of "Rhapsody in Blue," by the Iturbis, Jose and Amaro (Red Seal, 15215-6).

All of the Victor Records mentioned in the foregoing are available in the splendid record library maintained in Victoria by Fletcher Bros.

CHURCH REVENUE SHOWS INCREASE

Encouraging Reports Read at Annual Gathering of Centennial Congregation

The annual meeting of Centennial United Church was held recently, and the large attendance was evidence of the keen interest being taken in the work of the church. At the request of the pastor, Rev. Dr. A. D. Reid, the chair was taken by Rev. S. S. Peat.

Reports given by the various departments of the church were very encouraging. The financial report showed a total amount of $6,381 had been raised during 1938, an advance of nearly $2,000 over the previous year. Of this amount, $643 was raised by the Ladies' Guild and $408 by the Women's Missionary Society.

Three new members were added to the session, being Messrs. J. F. Byce, F. Hall and Fletcher; to the committee of stewards, Messrs. G. Lane and J. Hopkins. George Lane was elected treasurer for the church. A vote of thanks was tendered to F. Mealing, the retiring treasurer, for the splendid work done during his five years in office. Miss Samuelson was re-elected secretary to the official board.

At the close of the meeting, refreshments were served by the Ladies' Guild.

What Today Means

"AQUARIUS"

If February 5 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 10 a.m. until noon, from 4 to 6 p.m., and from 9 to 11 p.m. The danger periods are from 8 to 10 a.m., from 7 to 9 p.m., and from 11 p.m. until midnight.

Do not expect other people to be considerate this day, for selfishness may keep them absorbed in their personal affairs. The lure of pleasure is likely to make people unmindful of their obligations to others. You cannot go wrong if you accord to your family and friends the same treatment you would like to receive. This is a day when faith ought to be a sustaining factor in the average person's life. Let no doubt or suspicion destroy yours, if you wish to experience happiness. If you blind yourself to faults, and in their place envision virtues, the chances are you will be well rewarded. Reasonable requests are apt to meet with a favorable reception this day, for the average persons is apt to be in a frame of mind to grant favors. Married and engaged couples, as well as those exchagging loving sentiments, must be careful to say or do nothing that might wound anyone's feelings.

If a woman and February 5 is your birthday, your social aspirations may equal your professional or commercial ambitions. Money seems to be a power that you are likely to wield ultimately. You might have to work very hard to get what you want, but eventually you should be successful, so never get discouraged. With you love is something you must cherish, never neglect, or treat indifferently, for it can bring you more happiness than all the money you might sooner or later possess. A business or professional career particularly as a writer, lecturer, musician, artist, actress or interior decorator ought to win for you distinction and freedom from financial cares. There are ample reasons for you to expect your married life to be a great success.

The child born on February 5 is generally studious, fun loving and extremely generous. Dame Fortune is likely to direct its footsteps in the right direction.

If a man and February 5 is your natal day, as long as you do not take yourself too seriously success probably will crown your efforts. Among the best activities in which you might engage are: law, medicine, architecture, engineering, theatrical work, selling and inventing.

MONDAY, FEBRUARY 6

"AQUARIUS"

If February 6 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 10:15 a.m. to 12:15 p.m., from 2:15 to 4:15 p.m. and from 7:15 to 9:15 p.m. The danger periods are from 8:15 to 10:15 a.m., from 5:15 to 7:15 p.m., and from 9:15 to 11:15 p.m.

A fear to express themselves in a decisive manner will handicap many people this day in furthering their plans. Pedestrians must exercise the utmost caution if they would avoid an accident. Punctuality is a virtue that no one should ignore this day, for delays in keeping engagements are apt to have disconcerting results. Don't mull over any fancied grievance or wrong, for a slow-rising anger will cause physical discomfitures. Mental reactions, unless an effort is made to conceal them, are likely to be quite apparent, so be careful in this respect. Unless you make every effort to practice self-control, momentary weaknesses may cause you a lot of trouble. Married and engaged couples, as well as those planning a way and means for an early betrothal, must be considerate in any request that they make this day, if they wish to escape criticism.

If a woman and February 6 is your birthday, you probably have the gift of developing an exceptionally pleasing personality and most gracious manners. You can become permanently successful only by being pleasant to everyone. Your smiles should be infectious, and your frowns disconcerting, so be lavish with your smiles. You will not need great wealth to make you happy and able to gratify your dearest hopes. Through social activities you may win many valuable friendships. Teaching, painting, interior decorating, professional entertaining, selling or writing appear to be among the activities that have the most to offer one of your versatility. Marriage appears to be the medium through which your greatest amount of happiness is likely to come.

The child born on February 6 is usually a high-spirited, energetic youngster with very definite ideas. Children born on this date seldom take opposition to their desires graciously, unless a reasonable explanation is offered. Through constructive ideas they frequently achieve great success in life.

If a man and February 6 is your natal day, only through unselfishness will your homelife be precisely what you wish it to be. Your ability evidently will win you some flattering recognition and financial independence. As a geologist, agriculturist, theatrical man, contractor, politician, clergyman or author you are apt to have an unusual amount of luck.

The village fire chief was interviewing a number of recruits in connection with the local A.R.P. movement.

"You," he indicated one. "You know we've only one engine at the fire station. Now, supposing we were called away to a fire while you were left alone at the station and another fire broke out during our absence. What would you do about the second call?"

The young man thought hard.

"I know, sir," he said at last. "I'd try to keep the other fire going till you got back from the first."

It was a New Year's party. Gladys, aged thirty and a bit, suddenly left the whist table, accompanied by an admiring suitor. Rushing up to her mother, she cried: "Oh, mother, I've won the booby!"

"Well, dear," exclaimed her mother, beaming, "come and let me kiss both of you!"

It's grand for our skin—the New Improved Palmolive.

There are three reasons why you'll like the new improved Palmolive too. It's new in mildness, has a new delightful perfume. And it's firmer, lasts longer, so it saves you money.

Ladies' Aid Holds Monthly Meeting

The monthly meeting of the Ladies' Aid of St. Paul's United Church, Sidney, was held at the residence of Mrs. C. C. Cochran, Roberts Point, Sidney. The president, Mrs. W. McCulloch, was in the chair, and there was a good number of members present. A number of former members, no longer resident in the district, also attended.

Mrs. D. M. Perley was elected as the representative on the committee of the Canadian Friends of China. Mrs. J. F. Simister was chosen a representative on the committee of the Firemen's Benefit Association.

On completion of the regular monthly business, Mrs. Sam Brethour, a charter member of the aid, which was started in the district forty-six years ago, gave a talk, telling of the work of the society at the time of its organization.

Mrs. Sam Brethour then presented Mrs. R. Douglas with an engraved silver tray and a corsage bouquet of Spring flowers from the members as an appreciation of Mrs. Douglas' work during six years as president, from which position she is retiring. Mrs. Douglas expressed her appreciation of the good wishes and told of the happy recollections she had during thirty years' association with the Ladies' Aid in the district. Mrs. J. F. Simister then presented Mrs. Sam Brethour with a bouquet of carnations from the members.

Among those present were four former presidents, Mrs. H. A. Ellis, Mrs. J. F. Simister, Mrs. J. E. McNeil and Mrs. R. H. Lowe. Refreshments were served buffet style from a table centred with a bowl of chrysanthemums.

Centennial to Sponsor Event

A musical appreciation evening sponsored by the Centennial United Church Young People's Society, will take place at Centennial Church next Tuesday when a feature will be the illustrated talk on "The Organ, Its Music and Appreciation Thereof," by Jack Smith, assistant organist of the First United Church. With illustrations on the organ, and some interesting demonstrations of the mechanism of the instrument itself, this will occupy the entire second part of the programme.

The first part of the entertainment will comprise vocal solos by Miss Gladys Farvon, W. Stott, and Miss Norma Beschizza, and a piano duet by Misses Mildred and Winnie Kerley.

Among the numbers to be played by the organist, Mr. Smith, will be Purcell's "Trumpet Tune and Air"; Henry Smart's "Chorale and Variations"; Vaughan-Williams' "Prelude on Lovely"; William Best's "Air and Variations"; Wolstenholme's "Allegretto"; Alfred Hollins' "Spring Song"; Lemare's "Berceuse in D"; and Elgar's "Land of Hope and Glory."

Pianist Will Give Recital

The recital to be given by Miss Gwendoline Harper, at the Oak Bay Theatre Hall on Tuesday, February 21, is creating much interest in local musical circles.

An added attraction on the programme will be the Paderewski Theme in A Major, which is to be a test piece in the forthcoming musical festival. Miss Harper was fortunate enough to study it with Sigismond Stojowski, friend and fellow-countryman of Ignace Paderewski. Mr. Stojowski, who resides in New York, is the teacher of Guimar Novaes, who has appeared three times this year with the New York Philharmonic, and Mischa Levitski, often heard by local radio listeners.

Another number of interest to young pianists will be the C Minor Fantasy by Mozart. Composed in Vienna in 1785, it was combined by the composer with a sonata in the same key of an earlier date.

Kinloch presided, in the unavoidable absence of the president, Mrs. G. Orr. Several letters of sympathy and congratulation were ordered sent. Committee reports were heard and the monthly bulletin read. Mrs. F. M. Gannon explained the hospital benefit scheme as proposed for the King's Daughter's Hospital, Duncan. Hope was expressed that a volunteer canvasser could be found among the institute members in this connection. An excellent report was given of the recent card party. It was decided that the provincial per capita tax should be paid immediately. In a discussion of "ways and means," tentative plans were launched for a "hope" chest, a card party in March, and a home-cooking sale in the Summer. Mrs. Kinloch concluded the meeting with some delightful readings from the works of Pauline Johnson. Tea was served by Mrs. Kinloch, Mrs. Orr and Mrs. W. Maitland.

GIVES HINTS FOR BEAUTY

Mrs. E. Newell, of MacFarlane Drug Co., Reveals Latest Treatments

—Photograph by Robert Foit.

MRS. E. NEWELL

Mrs. E. Newell, expert beautician of the MacFarlane Drug Company, returned here yesterday from Seattle, where she has been attending the Helena Rubinstein Beauty School. This school was attended by selected beauty experts from leading stores all over Western Canada and the Pacific Northwest.

Mrs. Newell brings back with her authoritative information regarding the current trend in beauty treatment, information which she is ready to impart to Victoria women. "For early Spring," she stated, "your face must wear all the tones of an orchid, from its delicate outer petals to the deep orchid red of its centre. It is smart to adopt the new orchid and beige pinks, the Java roses, the fuchsia and the purple prints and the whole family of blues that are the first color harbingers of the new season.

"Hair styles," she continued, "will remain high in front, but the upswept lines in the back will give way to a more youthful softness, generally flattering to most women. For sport, ribbon bows will hold the front curls in place, giving that 'little girl' look to complement the newest resort sportswear.

"Vibrant colors are the keynote for Spring fashions, the tulip tones in woolens, silks and suedes quite displacing the black of former seasons."

Sessions at the Helena Rubinstein Beauty School featured the most recent developments in youthifying face treatments, special treatments for eyes, throat, hands and contour; make-up for the Spring colors and fashions and corrective treatment for the oily or blemished skin, for the dry skin with lines, for freckles, wrinkles, double chins, enlarged pores and other ailments to which the modern complexion is heir.

This beauty school is sponsored by Madame Rubinstein as part of her system of making available to women the same exact scientific care they would receive if they went to her New York salon. The course which she has attended enables Mrs. Newell to dispense information as to the latest methods of skin care and reconditioning and the latest development in the science of beauty as introduced by Madame Rubinstein. Mrs. Newell is ready to give advice on personal beauty problems as well as suggestions on make-up for the new Spring colors and clothes.

REUNION DANCE

The fourth reunion dance of the Quadra School will be held on Friday in the school auditorium. There will be prizes for novelty dances and all past pupils will be welcome. The regular meeting of the P.-T.A. will be held on Tuesday, February 21.

THOSE FRIENDS

"My worst sin," she sighed, "is vanity. I spend hours every day admiring my beauty."

"That's not vanity," her friend replied. "That's imagination!"

Queen's Niece to Marry in March

LONDON, Feb. 4 (CP).—Love will find a way, so the young fellow who broke his engagement with the niece of Queen Elizabeth two years ago because he was too poor, will meet her at the altar after all.

The re-engagement of Kenneth Harington, twenty-seven, and Cecilia Bowes-Lyon, daughter of Lord Glamis, the Queen's brother, was announced today.

They had been engaged for three years when Harington broke the engagement in 1937, announcing he didn't believe in "love in a cottage." However, he left his job as junior assistant in the diplomatic service and went to work for a metal corporation.

The King and Queen may attend the wedding, which will be held in London on March 8.

Opera Excerpts To Be Presented

On Friday next, the Victoria Grand Opera Association will present the "Church Scene" from Act IV of Charles Gounod's "Faust," followed by Act III of Wallace's "Maritana," at the clubrooms, 1753 Rockland Avenue.

A fine cast will be heard in both excerpts. In "Faust," Peggy Moore will sing the role of Marguerite, while Mephistopheles will be sung by Clifford Prescott.

"Maritana" will present Patsy Swift in the title role, with George Farmer as Don Caesar, David Oldham as Don Jose, Olive Batchelor as Lazarillo, Arthur Jackman as King Charles and James McVie as the noble.

The cast will be supported by a full chorus and Basil Horsfall will be musical director. Costumes have been designed by Marjorie Barker, with scenery and lighting by Dorothy Cook and Horace Culver, respectively.

At the conclusion of the performance, refreshments will be served and dancing will follow. Any interested are invited to attend. Tickets may be had from any member or at the door.

BEAUTY SALON TO BE OPENED

Mrs. F. X. Russell Returns From Noted London Establishment

—Photograph by Campbell's Studio.
MRS. F. X. RUSSELL

To be operated as a branch of the well-known Mrs. Pomeroy's Beauty Salon, Bond Street, London, a new establishment will open at 102 Woolworth Building tomorrow morning. The beauty salon is under the licensee of Mrs. F. X. Russell, a former resident of Vancouver Island who has recently returned from England. In London, Mrs. Russell underwent an extensive training in beauty culture as laid down by the most advanced Continental methods, and she is a specialist in electrolysis.

Associated with Mrs. Russell will be Miss Doris Eley, a fully qualified expert in hairdressing, utilizing the latest method of permanent waving. Miss Sheilagh Russell will join the firm in the near future.

The Beauty Salon has been completely redecorated and renovated, stressing a modernistic motif with a color scheme of old rose and cream. In addition to all forms of beauty culture, a complete line of the famous Pomeroy Original Beauty Products, as prescribed by Jeanette Pomeroy, the founder, will be carried.

SAANICH ISSUES TEN NEW PERMITS

Building to Value of $6,955 Authorized in Past Week—Other Suburbs Quiet

Building in the suburban municipalities surrounding the city of Victoria suffered a decided falling off in the last week. Only in Saanich has there been permits for new buildings taken out during the week just closed.

At the Saanich Municipal Hall, there have been ten permits taken out, representing a total value of $6,995. Included among the permits are those for two homes. H. Tyler will erect a six-roomed home on Ernest Street which is to cost $3,500. A $1,700 home containing four rooms will be built for E. Stancil, Jr., on Colquitz Avenue.

The building in the three municipalities of Saanich, Oak Bay and Esquimalt during the month of January represented a total of over $56,000. Of this amount Saanich issued permits for $31,832, of which $30,250 represented new buildings.

Esquimalt permits for the first month of this year totaled $5,905.

CANADA'S DEBT IS $3,540,000,000

OTTAWA, Feb. 4 (CP).—Canada's national debt, at March 31 1938, totaled $3,540,237,614, Hon. Charles Dunning, Minister of Finance, told Robert Fair (S.C., Battle River), in the House of Commons. The net debt—total liabilities less act assets as of the same date amounted to $3,101,567,570.

Interest on the gross interest-bearing debt, funded and unfunded, was $101,780,368 paid in Canada and $30,337,052 paid outside this country.

TO INCREASE DEFENCES

CAPETOWN, Feb. 4 (CP-Havas).—Increased expenditure for defence was foreshadowed in the Speech from the Throne read at the opening of the South African Parliament by Sir Patrick Duncan, Governor-General.

According to Culbertson

The following letter, written in connection with the recently concluded National Bridge Examination, contains some very pertinent truths, and, I think, will be interesting to all readers who took the test.

"Just now, toward the fag-end of your current bridge exam, do I tumble to a certain psychology that has undoubtedly cost me some points and has, I feel sure, done the same for others that might be included in that large group who, while playing the game with great gusto and enthusiasm, lack the expert's discrimination.

"The particular angle involved is simply this, that many of us, I believe, fail to realize that, in starting out on your examination, we are not only given a perfect score to begin with, but 'master' partners too, and even more important, that our partners, too, are supposed to credit us with the same master rating that you have generously given us at the start.

"This latter point seems particularly important in that my own experience shows that on occasion, perhaps unconsciously, I have made a choice of bids or plays dictated by the known reaction to any particular bid being considered at the moment among my own particular bridge friends. Unfortunately, very few indeed are ever in the position of being taken at 'master' value by their partner, but still this assumption seems almost a mandatory one to arrive at the correct conclusion to the problems that you give us. Could we all start out with this thought firmly in mind, it would seem that we would all score appreciably better.

"G. W. deS., Boston, Mass."

This correspondent has precisely the right idea of the philosophy back of the examination, and I commend his remarks to the attention of those readers who will enter the next exam.

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ♣	Pass	1 ♦	Pass
2 ♣	Pass	2 NT	Pass
3 NT	Pass	Pass	Pass

This interesting hand was analyzed in the December Bridge World magazine by Bruno Gruenewald, of Germany. Declarer's play shows how an expert goes to extreme lengths to protect stoppers. Against the three no trump contract, East opened the heart four, his five card diamond suit having been bid by the declarer. The average player in declarer's position (North) would either let this lead ride to the ten spot or would finesse with the queen. In either case, he would lose his contract. West would win with the king and, promptly shift to spades. Defenders would establish three spade tricks for themselves before West's club king was knocked out.

The actual declarer saw the danger of a spade shift, and further saw that unless the heart lead were "phoney," East had started with only four hearts and that, consequently, his suit could not be dangerous. On that basis, dummy's heart ace was played to the first trick, and, to maintain communication between the North-South hands, the club queen was led. (Declarer could not afford to play the ace and then the queen of clubs because if a defender had three to the king, he would hold off and the dummy would be dead.) West did hold up his king for one round, but the club jack followed, and, of course, he had to win with the king or lose it entirely. Now on a spade return declarer hopped up with the ace and led his remaining club to dummy. In all, he took five club tricks, two diamonds, one heart, and one spade, thus fulfilling the contract.

THE MISERY OF HIS COLD BEGINS TO GO

When you just do this:

Massage VapoRub on the throat, chest, and back. Then spread a thick layer on the chest and cover with a warmed cloth. (No dosing, no stomach upsets.)

VapoRub's poultice-and-vapor action goes right to work—direct, through the skin like a poultice, while its medicated vapors released by the body warmth are inhaled direct to the irritated air-passages with every breath.

This two-way action (inhalation and stimulation) loosens phlegm—clears the air-passages—checks tendency to cough—eases muscular soreness or tightness—relieves local congestion—and he soon feels comfortable again.

Long after he relaxes into restful sleep, VapoRub keeps right on working. And often by morning the worst of his cold is over. No wonder so many mothers put faith in VapoRub whenever anyone in the family has a cold!

Everton Now Tied With Derby Squad For Premier Place

Toffee-Makers Blank Liverpool, 3-0, While the County Is Held to Draw by Blackpool—Arsenal Scores 2-0 Victory Over Sunderland—Stoke City Team in Easy Triumph

LONDON, Feb. 4 (CP).—After setting the pace in English football since October 29, Derby County has relinquished its hold on the leadership to Everton. The teams are tied with point totals of thirty-eight, but the Lancastrians move on to the top ring of the league ladder by virtue of a superior goal average and a game in hand.

Leaders in other divisions retained their places following today's games, although Newport County, wonder team of the Third Division's Southern section lost at home, 2-0, to Bristol City. Sheffield United moved into a tie with Blackburn Rovers at the top of the Second Division, as the result of a 2-1 triumph over Norwich City.

Derby and Everton both played on foreign soil at the week-end. The former was held to a 2-2 draw at Blackpool, while the toffee makers blanked the neighboring Liverpool eleven, 3-0, the score accurately reflecting the run of the play.

TIES THE SCORE

The lead was short-lived, Jones knotting the count before the interval. The honesters did the bulk of the attacking in the second half and Lewis scored. Hinchcliffe equalized four minutes later.

Everton proved an attractive team at Liverpool, excelling in all departments of the game. Kemp in the home team's goal was called upon to save five times before Sagar touched the ball at the other end. Bentham gave the toffee makers a 1-0 lead at the interval, and in the second half Lawton tallied twice.

There was a good deal of luck about Leicester City's 2-0 verdict over Leeds United, who finished with nine men on account of injuries. Liddle and Dewis were the Yorkshire team's sharpshooters.

Steel, Stoke City international centre forward, rammed in three of the Midlanders' goals in their great 6-1 victory over Chelsea. The pensioners appeared demoralized after being three goals down at half-time, but Spence saved them from a whitewashing by tallying after Baker, Smith and Sale had advanced the city's score.

Playing without Bryn Jones and Crayston, Arsenal did well to whip Sunderland, 2-0, in London. Bastin and Lewis netted for the gunners. Charlton Athletic kept Birmingham pinned in the cellar position by winning a tight game, 4-3, at St. Andrew's Park.

SHEFFIELD WINS

Hampson scored the goal that gave Sheffield United the decision in its Second Division encounter with Plymouth Argyle, and Blackburn Rovers made no mistake in a home game with Millwall. Fielding an unchanged side since Christmas the Rovers won 3-1.

Bowden was missing from the Newcastle United side that lost 4-0 to Coventry City for the whole of the second half. He suffered a fractured jaw, and after his retirement the visitors ran in three goals.

Newport County and Barnsley appear likely champions of the two sections of the Third Division. The Welshmen, despite their defeat by Bristol City, retain an eight-point advantage over Crystal Palace, who went under 4-0 to Clapton Orient. Barnsley blanked Bradford City, 2-0, and now lead the Nothern section by nine points.

Victoria West and Esquimalt Victors In Soccer Tussles

Greenshirts Defeat Garrison, 3-1, at Heywood Avenue in First Division Match—Dockers Blank Saanich Thistles at the Enclosure, 4-0

Victoria West, first half winners without a defeat, and Esquimalt were returned triumphant in yesterday's first division matches in the second half race in the Victoria and District Football League. The greenshirts came from behind at Heywood Avenue to take the Garrison eleven from Work Point Barracks, 3-1, while the Dockers proved too strong for the inexperienced Saanich Thistles at the Athletic Park and won by a 4-0 score. The match at Heywood Avenue drew a fair turnout, but only a handful watched the tussle at the enclosure.

The Garrison showed plenty of speed in the first half and were beating the Wests to the ball nine times out of ten. The unlevel condition of the ground bothered both teams during the game, the ball bouncing here and there, and it was mighty hard to control. During the early stages Harold Sage made Goalie Coldwell make a brilliant save of a wicked drive. Play continued at a fast clip, with the soldiers holding the edge. Then after nineteen minutes, Evans, left winger, crashed home a beautiful goal, a bullet drive to the far corner of the net after receiving Thomson's cross.

EVANS SCORES

Right after Evans nearly scored again, but Restell made a fine save. At the other end Coldwell pulled off a great stop of Morgan's going-away shot, but gave away a corner in doing so. The flag kick was finally cleared and away went the soldiers on another dangerous raid, this time Worswick hit the crossbar from in close. Another drive hit the upright and several more shots were blocked as the Garrison stormed around the West goal.

After forty-one minutes the greenshirts got home the equalizer when Harold Sage tricked his way past Wilkinson, Garrison fullback, and picked the far corner with a fast-rising drive from close range. The half ended with the score still unchanged.

Early in the last half Dallimore made Coldwell make another great save when he took Morgan's pass and rifled a terrific drive goalwards. After this McAllister came on at right wing for G. Wilkinson. Only five minutes of the half had gone when Nip Sage broke the deadlock. He took Morgan's pass, turned quickly in the goal area and scored to the far corner. Play slowed up as the game progressed, and at the twenty-eight-minute mark, Dallimore tricked his way through a mass of players and picked the corner with a fine, accurate shot.

During the late minutes, Alan Wright, West back, was injured and was replaced by Mickey Smith, who went to the half line and Cooper to the back division.

McMillan refereed and teams follow:

Victoria West—T. Restell, Wright, Bell, Cooper, C. Restell, R. Barnes, N. Sage, H. Sage, Morgan, Dallimore and Smith.

ESQUIMALT WINS

Esquimalt coasted through a disorganized Saanich eleven by a score of 4-0 at the Royal Athletic Park. The suburban squad put up a fair battle, but their team work was completely lacking. The winners didn't turn in a polished performance by any means, but with two earned goals and two penalties, they had a comfortable margin over their younger opponents.

Saanich played their best ball in the opening half and battled on comparatively even terms with the Dockers. Half way through the stanza, however, the Dockers climaxed a rush when "Scotty" Stewart banged the ball past Webster, the country lads' net-minder.

The Dockers clicked a little better as they went into the final forty-five minutes and kept command of the play, with the exception of a few breaks that Saanich made towards Hornsby, guarding the hemp for the blueshirts.

Five minutes after the resumption of play, Payne grabbed a loose ball in front of the Saanich net and beat Webster with a corner shot. John Watt narrowly missed scoring a few minutes later when he hoisted a cross from right wing into the crossbar.

SAANICH BOTTLED UP

Esquimalt kept the suburbanites bottled up in their own territory, and at one time had three corners in a row, but their front line was wobbly. Half way through the period, Murray Speller handled the ball in the penalty zone, and Barnswell slipped the awarded shot into the corner, making it 3-0 for Esquimalt. Saanich managed a few rushes, but they were wild when they got within scoring distance.

Saanich Thistles—Webster, Crowe, Bissenden, Mowat, Speller, Underwood, Ono, Gibson, Robson, Tregellis, Hope and McDonald.

McGavin Cup Play Next Saturday in Local Soccer Loop

SEMI-final rounds in the McGavin Cup football series will be played in the first division next Saturday afternoon, Secretary Axel Kinnear announced yesterday. Victoria West and Victoria City will meet at the Athletic Park at 2:30, with Tom Robb refereeing, and the Navy, of the Wednesday League, will oppose Saanich Thistles at Heywood Avenue at the same time, with Dave Swan in charge. It was also announced that the Vancouver United is expected here for an Inter-City League game with Victoria United on February 18 at the enclosure.

Witter Is Elected Badminton Head On the Mainland

VANCOUVER, Feb. 4 (CP).—H. B. Witter, of Victoria, was elected president of the British Columbia Badminton Association at the annual meeting here tonight. He succeeds K. Bramall, Vancouver.

J. E. Underhill, of Vancouver, was elected vice-president, and Harry Monk, also of Vancouver, returned as secretary.

Under a new ruling adopted tonight the Vancouver Island, Mainland and Interior district associations will elect their own president, vice-president and secretary. They will have no representative on the provincial board in future.

MARGARET TAYLOR

OF Kelowna, former holder of the Canadian badminton title, who retained her British Columbia crown last night in Vancouver by scoring an easy victory over Mrs. Del Barkhuff, of Seattle, United States national champion, by scores of 11-2 and 11-4. It was the second straight year that the Interior girl has had possession of the silverware, symbolic of the championship.

McKechnie Cup Series

	W.	L.	Points F.	A.	P.
Victoria	2	1	47	30	4
Vancouver	1	1	15	19	2
Varsity	1	1	32	45	2

Yesterday's Score

Varsity 16, Victoria 6.

Playing inspired ball from the first blast of Referee E. L. "Buck" Yeo's whistle, Varsity Thunderbirds, present holders of the historic McKechnie Cup, symbolic of Rugby supremacy in British Columbia, yesterday upset the dope bucket by handing Victoria's Crimson Tide a 16-6 setback at Macdonald Park. It was the first defeat of the season for the local ruggers in "Big Three" competition.

The outcome left Victoria heading the 1938-39 race for the silverware, two points in front of Vancouver and Varsity. With two games remaining to be played, the future resting place of the coveted "mug" is much a matter of conjecture. Vancouver "Reps" will play the Thunderbirds on February 18, and Victoria will journey to the Mainland to oppose the Terminal City team on March 4.

Heavy favorites in pre-game wagering, the Capital City fifteen yesterday showed a complete reversal of form to that of their earlier matches, and the result came as a distinct surprise to Victoria followers of the oval ball game.

POOR SHOWING

Beaten by a better team on the day's play, the locals turned in their most miserable performance of the season, and looked nothing like the fifteen that earlier in the series turned back Varsity and Vancouver in convincing fashion. The Crimson Tide backfield fumbled badly all afternoon, and even defensively left much to be desired.

Varsity presented a fighting fifteen that had their backs to the wall at the start and fought like Trojans all afternoon. They presented a swift moving and smart handling three-quarter line, a pack of forwards that were superior to Victoria, and a smart little halfback by the name of Sandy Lang who picked the ball out of the scrum more than once.

Victoria missed "Tor" Young, husky forward, in the pack, while there was an apparent weakness in the centre of the backfield. Jack Grogan, brilliant kicking fullback, fumbled a number of times during the afternoon, but regained some lost prestige by booting Victoria's only points.

With much depending on the coming match with the Vancouver "Reps," a shake-up in the local fifteen appeared certain after their showing against Varsity. While no official intimation has been received, it is quite probable that three or four changes will be made in the Crimson Tide's line-up for the final match of the 1938-39 McKechnie Cup series.

DROPS OVER GOAL —

Johnny Bird, Varsity fullback, and Jim Harmer, forward, accounted for thirteen of the visitors' sixteen points, while Tod Tremblay was the other student point-getter. Bird dropped a beautiful field goal in the initial stanza from the thirty-yard line and in the last half joined the three-quarter line and went over for the final score of the game. Harmer garnered Varsity's first try and added three points in the second half from a free kick, while Tremblay raced fifty yards for a try in the opening stanza.

Twelve minutes from the start, Varsity opened the scoring when Jim Harmer crossed the Crimson Tide's line for the initial try. Tod Tremblay relieved a Victoria attack and followed up on his kick. In a subsequent scramble for the loose ball Harmer gained possession and scored. The attempted conversion failed.

Crimson Tide attempted a three-quarter run and Joe Roberts, inside three-quarter, was grassed. Victoria gained their first points and only initial half score a few minutes later when the visitors were penalized for "feet up" in the scrum. Jack Grogan took the thirty-yard kick and scored.

Varsity looked dangerous as play resumed and assumed the lead again when Johnny Bird, moving down with the backfield, dropped a field goal from thirty yards out. At the other end of the field Victoria was awarded a free kick and Grogan just missed.

Local forwards carried the ball at their feet and Varsity were forced to touch down behind their own goal. With play at centrefield the locals attempted a passing bout only to have Tod Tremblay pick off Harry Barber's pass and race fifty yards for a try. It was the turning point in the match.

HAS BIG LEAD

Varsity continued to attack as the half came to a close and the fifteens reached the breather with the score 10-3 for the visitors.

Thunderbirds attacked from the kick-off after the interval and kept play well in Victoria territory. They widened their margin at the twelve-minute mark when Ferguson was penalized for blocking and Harmer scored from the free kick.

Victoria added their final points ten minutes later when Harmer was penalized for holding C. Doheny and Grogan made the kick good. The score seemed to give the Crimson Tide new life momentarily and for a few minutes they fought like wounded tigers.

Tommy Lumsden, young three-quarter, was injured a few minutes later and helped from the field.

Varsity dominated again as the match progressed and wound up with a beautiful try. After all members of the three-quarter line handled the ball Johnny Bird, fullback, up with the threes, took an inside pass and scored making the final count 16-6 for the students from the Point Grey institution.

More than 1,500 people witnessed the match and the addition of the Varsity Band and the blue and gold colors draped over the front of the large grandstand added color to the big event. Approximately 400 students were in the Varsity rooting section.

Immediately following the match the students "rushed" the field and walked off with the Victoria goal posts. With a student carrying the Union Jack the procession with the posts on their shoulders marched quietly from the field and another McKechnie Cup game with Varsity as victors was written into the record books.

DOMINOES SCORE VICTORY OVER VARSITY, 43-29

Jackson's Scoring Punch Feature of Victoria Triumph

Ace Forward Goes on Basket Gathering Spree at Expense of Students and Pots Nineteen Points —Dominoes Lead All the Way—Ramblers Win, but Lose the Series to Buckles

Paced to victory by the brilliant marksmanship of Busher Jackson, ace forward, Victoria Dominoes last night defeated Varsity hoopmen, 43-29, in an exhibition basketball game played at the High School gymnasium. Jackson, back in top form after a short slump due to sickness, dropped home nineteen points, eight in the first half and eleven in the final stanza.

Fourth berth occupants in the Mainland Senior League, Thunderbirds were outplayed in the first half and were trailing by thirteen points at the rest interval with the score 24-13. In the last two quarters the visitors made things interesting for the local hoopsters and just missed matching the Dominoes' second-hlaf total by a single point.

Locals potted three baskets to assume a 6-0 lead and then ran their advantage to 10-1. Varsity added four points and the Dominoes one before the quarter ended. Locals scored five field baskets and a foul shot, while the visitors dropped home one basket and three shots from the strip.

WELL IN FRONT

Keeping well in front, Dominoes made seven baskets and two fouls in the second canto for sixteen points, the highest single session score during the evening. Varsity replied with nine, three field goals and a like number of foul shots. Half-time arrived with the score 24-13 in favor of the local hoopmen.

Varsity displayed plenty of that "college spirit" in the final quarters, and while they never came any closer than within nine points of the Dominoes, they made the evening chores heavy and the game interesting for the spectators.

In the third quarter the visitors outscored the locals, 9-4, and reached the three-quarter mark with the score 32-23 against them. Dominoes came back again in the last session, and with Busher Jackson potting four field baskets, scored twelve points to the students' six.

Ran Matthison, veteran cageman and a member of the Varsity hoopsters when they won the Canadian championship, shared Varsity scoring honors with Straight. Matthison turned in a grand exhibition of dribbling and was the spearhead of the visitors' attack.

CAPTURE SERIES

Ramblers, four points down in the two-game series with Buckle's Service for the intermediate "A" playoffs, threw away a great chance to earn the right to meet Eight Aces in the final when they established an 18-7 lead at half-time. This made the Ramblers seven points ahead on the series, but the tide changed in the final half when the Service squad came back with a rush of baskets to outscore their opponents 17 to 9 to win the final berth with the Aces by a lone point. Ramblers won last night, 27-24, but dropped the series, 62-61.

Five baskets by Sparks in the first half, along with the odd field goal by his mates, gave the Ramblers their margin at the half-time whistle. Buckles came back with determination in the last period, and gradually cut into the Ramblers' lead until they finally caught and then passed them to gain a thrilling victory in the series. In the dying seconds the Ramblers missed a couple of fine scoring chances which would have meant victory.

Tim McCulloch, Seattle, and Levy handled the main game, while Macmurchie and Levy were in charge of the play-off tussle.

RECORDS ARE ESTABLISHED IN THE EAST

Two World Marks Smashed And One Tied at Indoor Track Meeting

NEW YORK, Feb. 4 (AP).—Two world records were broken and another equalled tonight before a cheering crowd of 16,000 spectators who packed Madison Square Garden to capacity for the thirty-second annual Millrose games.

As expected, Glenn Cunningham, the durable Kansan, carried off his sixth victory in seven tries at the featured Wanamaker mile and now, as expected, the Midwest produced another distance-running sensation in Gregory Rice, of Notre Dame, who captured the two-mile.

The record breakers, in the order of legitimacy of their efforts, were Roy Staley, of the Southern California A.A., and John Borican, negro stylist from the Shore A.C. Elberton, N.J. Staley cut one-tenth of a second off the world record for the sixty-yard high hurdles in taking his heat in :7.3, and then equalled that time in winning his semi-final and the final. Borican erased one of the record books' older standards. He clicked off two-thirds of a mile in 2:39.4-6 under the former mark set in 1923 by James J. Connolly, of Georgetown. It was the first time this event had been run since 1924 when Lloyd Hahn scored in 2:44.

In addition to their efforts Herbert Thompson, New York negro flash, ran the sixty-yard sprint final in :6.1, equal to the accepted world record set last Winter by Ben Johnson and Perrin Walker.

RECREATION CENTRES

Despite attempts to publicize the Provincial Recreation Centres, there are many people who are still unaware of the existence of these classes who would like to participate in them. New members are joining each week, and in most cases they were entirely unaware of these classes and pleasantly surprised at discovering them. These classes, sponsored by the Provincial and Federal Governments, are free of charge to both men and women of all ages. Members may go to as many centres as they desire. For information, phone E 7512 or write to Mrs. Joan Horsfield, in charge of the women's classes, or Alf Batchelor, in charge of men's activities, 303 Hibben-Bone Building.

Lake Hill women's class will be held on Thursday evening next week instead of Tuesday. This includes both senior and junior groups, and the class will start at the usual time.

Women members who attend the Memorial Hall dancing class on Wednesday evenings are advised that on February 15 the class will be held in the Junior High School gym, corner Yates Street and Fernwood Road. This change is for one night only. Classes will be resumed at the Memorial Hall the following week.

Mrs. P. D. Preedy and Mr. Ockenden were the winners of the telephone bridge held last Friday. The booby prize was taken by Miss B. Brown and Mr. Lenberton, the consolation prize going to Mrs. Love and Frank Dale-Johnson.

The P.R.C. women's basketball team lost a decision to Victoria College girls, the score being 24 to 14 for the College team.

The big Sooke Centre Valentine dance is scheduled for the coming Friday. Victoria instructors and leaders will give an exhibition during the evening, the women doing a military tap dance, the men with a tumbling display.

On the following Friday, February 17, the Victoria Centre dance will be held at the Crystal Garden.

WOMEN'S GOLF IS AT UPLANDS

P.N.W. Tournament to Be Held in June — Other Events Planned

Details are being worked out for a particularly active year of competition at the Uplands Gold Club, it was announced yesterday by James McIlraith, captain of the club.

"This year we will assist in the Pacific Northwest Golf Association championship tournament," Mr. Ilraith stated. "The ladies qualifying round and first and second rounds will be played at the Uplands Club on June 19 and 24 after which the remainder of the match play will be transferred to the Colwood course."

On February 19 the qualifying eighteen holes for the Feesey Cup tournament will be played at the Uplands course. The first and second rounds will be played on February 26 and the semi-finals and final will be played on March 5. Full handicap will be allowed in the qualifying round, Mr. McIlraith explained.

The Uplands Golf Club also will be hosts to the ladies' city championship to be played during the week commencing September 25.

It has been decided to hold the monthly medal play for members of the Uplands Club on the first Sunday in each month this year. There will be prizes for the low net score and also low gross score. In connection with the medal play, Mr. Ilraith announced that the club had changed the system of handicapping, having adopted the Royal Canadian Golf Association handicap rules.

GETTING READY

In preparation for an active season of competitions, the directors of the club are now busily engaged making up a schedule of events, which should be ready for release in a week or two.

Also anticipating an increase in the numbers entering competitive events, the club has carried out further improvements to the course. The putting green has been considerably improved, and new cups and flags installed. The pro shop has been repainted, repaired and new features installed, while the hot water system for the shower rooms also has been equipped with new apparatus, insuring a greater supply of hot water. All fairways have been rerolled and work is progressing in connection with the reseeding of unhealed divot holes. The drainage system has been gone over thoroughly again, so that there is now a quick runaway under heavy rain conditions.

TOPSY MACKAY AND PEARSON TAKE HONORS

Win Western Canada Table Championships at Crystal Garden

Victoria and visiting table tennis stars last night shared honors in the Western Canada championship finals played at the Crystal Garden. Local players won the women's singles and mixed doubles titles and out-of-town netters walked off with the men's singles and men's doubles crowns.

Miss Topsy Mackay, defending singles titleholder, retained her championship with a three-set victory over her sister, Miss Mary Mackay, Pacific Northwest champion. The winner was at top form and had too many shots for her opponent. After taking the first and second sets with scores of 21-12 and 21-11, respectively, the titleholder met with real opposition in the third fixture, finally winning 21-17.

Ray Pearson, Seattle ace who has held practically all Pacific Coast titles at various times, succeeded Doug Handling, Vancouver, as Western Canada champion. In the semi-finals Pearson eliminated J. Wilson, a townsman, and the player who sent Handling, defending champion, to the sidelines in the third round. The scores were 21-11, 21-12, 24-22. Continuing to display top form, Pearson defeated H. Philan, Portland, 21-13, 21-13, 21-13. Philan is Oregon State champion and gained the Western Canada final by defeating D. Vaughan, another Rose City exponent, 21-8, 18-21, 21-7, 21-8.

EVENING'S HIGHLIGHT

The highlight of the evening's play was the men's doubles final, a five-set battle that provided many excellent plays and a grand array of shots. T. Abendroth, Portland, and J. Wilson, Seattle, finally lifted the championship by defeating D. Vaughan and H. Philan, Portland combination, 17-21, 21-7, 21-9, 7-21, 21-16.

In the all-Victoria mixed doubles final Miss Topsy Mackay and Vic Tully defeated Miss Mary Mackay and Bill Cotton in four sets. The scores were 21-14, 21-18, 16-21, 21-17.

Rangers Put Out Hamilton in Cup Play in Scotland

More Than 75,000 Pack Ibrox Park to See Glasgow Eleven Blank Accies in Second Round of Scottish Cup, 2-0—Celtic Wins Easily—Hearts Score Fourteen Goals Again

GLASGOW, Feb. 4 (CP).—Drawing power of Glasgow Rangers and Celtic, two of the most colorful clubs in big-time soccer, was demonstrated today as Scottish Football Cup second-round matches were played. Both teams advanced to the third round.

More than 75,000 persons jammed Ibrox Park to watch their favorites, the league-leading Rangers, pull out a thrilling 2-0 victory over Hamilton Academicals in the feature match of the twelve games. A record attendance of 6,300 saw Celtic at Montrose drub the Second Division entry, 7-1.

Victor over Celtic and Rangers in last year's competition, Kilmarnock bowed out of this year's race at Edinburgh, losing, 3-1, to Hibernians. The Killies lost out, 4-2, in a replayed overtime struggle to East Fife in the final for the trophy last year.

RANGERS IN FORM

Most spectacular week-end match was the Rangers-Hamilton tangle. The light blues were without the services of Gray and McPhail, regulars on the line-up, but showed true championship form to blank the Accies. Lyness scored the first-half goal, and Alec Venters, top scorer in major football, netted the other near the end of the game.

The famous Parkhead eleven, who led the league for most of the season and then hit a snag, had little trouble at Montrose. Crum paced the goal-getters with three, Divers scored twice and Delaney and McDonald accounted for one each. Rodin averted the shutout.

Kilmarnock jumped into an early lead against Hibernians and went into the second half on top, 1-0. The Hibernians, who have shown vast form improvement this season, rallied in the final forty-five minutes and rammed in three goals. Ross was the Killies' goal-getter, while Nutley netted twice and Milne once for the home team.

SCORES FOURTEEN

Record count of the day was posted at Edinburgh where Hearts, second-place eleven in league warfare, pranced through to a 14-1 shellacking over Elgin City, minor league entrant. The big leaguers also scored fourteen goals in their first-round match against Penicuik Athletic. Black and Garrett each scored four, Warren three, and Briscoe, Walker and Dykes one each. McLennan looked after the city's scoring.

In an all-First Division contest, Aberdeen drubbed Queen's Park, only amateur club in major play, 5-1. Biggs led sharp-shooters with two goals. Hamilton, Patillo and Nicholson adding one each for the Dons. Browning scored Queen's solo.

Other First Division clubs to advance were Motherwell, Queen of South, Third Lanark, St. Mirren and Falkirk. Motherwell walloped Dundee United, 5-1, on the latter's grounds; Queen of South, at home, blanked Babcock and Wilcox, 5-0, and Third Lanark defeated Cowdenbeath, Second Division leaders, 3-0. Falkirk scored a 7-0 victory over Airdrieonians, Second League representative, and St. Mirren whipped Edinburgh City, 3-1, last Wednesday.

Two drawn matches were played. Dundee and Clyde battled to a scoreless draw and the Blairgowrie-Buckie Thistle match ended 3-3.

WALES DEFEATS SCOTLAND IN RUGBY GAME, 11-3

Welshmen Chalk Up Great Victory Over Visiting Aggregation

Crowd of 50,000 Watches Home Fifteen Come Through With Win in International Series—Victors Show Vast Superiority During Match—Leads, 6-0, at the Half

CARDIFF, Wales, Feb. 4 (CP).—Fifty-five thousand spectators cheered Wales to victory over Scotland in an international Rugby match here today. The Welshmen won 11-3 to record their twenty-fourth triumph since the series started in 1883.

Fielding a revamped team from that defeated 3-0 by England at Twickenham two weeks ago, Wales showed decided superiority and won by a goal, a penalty goal and a try to a penalty goal. Both countries now are credited with twenty-four victories, two matches ending in stalemates. Last year at Edinburgh the Scots won 8-6.

Today's decision was all the more meritorious in view of the fact that the home team was handicapped for a good portion of the game through injuries to two players. Howard Davies, Swansea fullback, twisted a knee midway through the first half but continued to play. Shortly before the interval Haydn Tanner, clever Swansea scrum half, was carried off with an injured arm. He returned fifteen minutes later and played with his arm in bandages. Only ten minutes had elapsed when Malcolm Davies gave the Welshmen the lead. Wilfred Wooller failed to convert the young South African-born three-quarter's try.

OPENING HALF

Wales played at full strength but the Scots made two changes, J. R. S. Innes, Aberdeen University, replacing J. G. S. Forrest, Cambridge University three-quarter, and W. R. C. Brydon, Heriotonians halfback, coming in for T. F. Dorward, of Gala.

The visitors provided the first thrill of the match. After a couple of midfield scrums, Shaw kicked ahead and, running strongly, appeared well set to cross the line, but Williams grounded him in the nick of time.

At the other end, Wooller with a forty-yard punt put Wales on the attack but the movement made little headway against keen tackling.

After ten minutes Malcolm Davies and Williams chased a long cross-kick by Wooller, the former eventually beating Roberts and opening the score for Wales. Wooller failed to convert.

Both sides tackled keenly but the fullbacks kicked poorly. At this stage Wales had an edge in the rugged play and in another raid Wooller kicked a penalty goal to give the home players a six-point lead.

The Welshmen proved better scrummagers while Elvet Jones and Williams were too speedy for the Scottish three-quarters.

Howard Davies twisted his knee but pluckily resumed although limping badly. Just before the interval Wooller nearly got over but Roberts brought him down with a grand tackle five yards out.

SECOND HALF

A long touch-finder by Howard Davies enabled Wales to gain a foothold in Scottish territory. Young and Duff made a great effort to break away in a Welsh forward rush but the tackling of the opposing backs prevented a score.

Innes showed a great turn of speed to overtake Jones in a wild rush for the line. He brought him down a few yards out and saved a certain try.

Scotland at this stage attacked strongly and the Welsh backs were pressed in their own territory. Tanner was taken off injured, E. London being brought out of the pack to take the Swansea scrum half's place.

Tanner returned after fifteen minutes with his right forearm bandaged, but the visitors had an edge in the scrum. Crawford reduced the margin after eighteen minutes' play by converting a penalty kick.

Wales retaliated and Travers, grabbing a loose ball went over for a try which Wooller converted. A minute later Williams nearly increased the score through a fast sprint. The home players continued to dominate the play, Scotland's efforts being confined to spasmodic raids.

Johnny Samis Wins Over Dick Birch in Straight Set Final

Retains British Columbia Badminton Crown by Scoring 15-8, 15-10 Victory—Margaret Taylor Repeats Last Year's Win Over Mrs. Barkhuff

VANCOUVER, Feb. 4 (CP).—Margaret Taylor, of Kelowna, B.C., last year's British Columbia women's singles champion, retained her title tonight by defeating Mrs. Del Barkhuff, of Seattle, United States singles champion, 11-2, 11-4, in the Provincial badminton championships and Pacific Coast invitation tournament here.

Johnny Samis, of Vancouver, last year's Canadian and British Columbia singles champion, also retained his Provincial title when he ousted Dick Birch, another Vancouver star and former Canadian titlist, in two straight sets in the final match. Scores were 15-8, 15-10.

AMERICANS LOSE

Mrs. Del Barkhuff and Miss Zoe Smith, of Seattle, former United States women's doubles champions, were knocked out in the final round of the women's doubles by Miss Elearnor Young and Miss Jocelyn Pease, of Vancouver, 17-14, 18-16, 18-15.

The Vancouver pair were down 10-5 in the last set and rallied to bring the score to 13-all before winning the match.

Dick Yeager and Hamilton Law, of Seattle, United States doubles champions, were defeated by Johnny Samis and Dick Birch, of Vancouver, in the men's doubles final, 15-7, 18-17.

In the last game Samis and Birch broke a 13-13 tie, only to have the Seattle stars even it up again at 14-all. Then the Vancouverites took three consecutive points, and again Yeager and Law squared things at 17-all. It took the Vancouver players four serves to score the final marker.

Last year's champions were Samis and Jack Underhill, Vancouver player who was eliminated earlier in the tournament when he teamed up with another city man.

In the mixed doubles final, Norman Mustart and Eleanor Young, both of Vancouver, defeated Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Underhill, 15-8, 15-9.

Tookes Set Back Westerns Cagers To Take the Lead

VANCOUVER, Feb. 4 (CP).—Tookes took over sole possession of the Inter-City Basketball League leadership tonight with a 43-30 win over Westerns. They now have eighteen points against Westerns' sixteen.

Munros, in third place, defeated the cellar-dwelling New Westminster Adanacs, 28-24, in the other game of tonight's double-header.

Bob Osborne, with fifteen, and Russ Kennington, with ten, were high scorers for Tookes, who led all the way. The first quarter finished with the count 9-5, and Tookes maintained their four-point lead at the half, with the score 18-14. The third frame ended 33-19.

Charles Laughton Gives Unique Characterization

Based on a W. Somerset Maugham story, the picture casts Laughton in the role of "Ginger Ted," a unique and interesting characterization which he handles with all the adroitness and finish which he lent to the parts of Captain Bligh in "Mutiny on the Bounty," and the title role of "Rembrandt."

At the inception of the action, 'Ginger Ted" is disrupting the peace of a tropical Dutch Indies island. English remittance man and beachcomber, he is at odds with the scheme of things on the island. The island's Dutch controleur, a missionary named Miss Jones and her brother Dr. Jones, have a hard time trying to control him. Yet the controleur prefers his company to that of the strict, humorless Miss Jones and her fussy brother. At the same time, Miss Jones is having a difficult time keeping "Ginger" away from her native girl students.

Charles Laughton's wife, Elsa Lanchester, delivers a fine performance as Miss Jones. Tyrone Guthrie, in the role of Dr. Jones, and Robert Newton as the controleur, are outstanding members of the supporting cast.

"THE FRONT PAGE" COMING TO PLAZA

Should a man die in time to get a good break in the morning papers? Several of the reporters in "The Front Page," the Howard Hughes picture which will open at the Plaza Theatre tomorrow, think so. Others, not so callous, may have other opinions, but in any event "The Front Page" provides thrill after thrill, with a man's neck at stake, and is one of the great dramas of this decade. The stage play ran for nearly a year on Broadway.

Pat O'Brien plays the role of Hildy Johnson, the brilliant and irresponsible reporter who tries to turn "respectable," but cannot. Adolphe Menjou reveals himself in quite a different type of role as the suave managing editor who refuses to let a good reporter get away from him would not behave . . . eyes that captured the heart of America's greatest showman, Florenz Ziegfeld . . . eyes that inspired poets and composers to praise them in poetry and song.

"THE GREAT ZIEGFELD" AT COLUMBIA MONDAY

The eyes have it, and that is one of the reasons why lovely Luise Rainer, Viennese star, was chosen to play the role of Anna Held in Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's "The Great Ziegfeld," which will open tomorrow at the Columbia Theatre.

GAY COMEDY IS AT THE ATLAS

Bob Hope and Shirley Ross Play Young Newlyweds in "Thanks For the Memory"

Perhaps the happiness of every newly married couple is punctured after a few months by one complication or another, but seldom does it happen as hilariously as it does in the romantic comedy, "Thanks for the Memory," which Paramount will present, beginning tomorrow, at the Atlas Theatre, starring Shirley Ross and Bob Hope.

The narrative concerns a young couple who are doing their best to improve their status despite their fun-loving friends, who think that the newlyweds have nothing to do but throw parties. The bewildered young husband is working as a salesman, and trying to write the great American novel on the side. When conditions remain the same, wifey puts her foot down and goes back to work, leaving the man of the house to do the housework and concentrate on his literary efforts.

SEABISCUIT IS SEEN IN GOLD CUP RACE

Seabiscuit appears in Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's "Stablemates," which will open tomorrow night at the Oak Bay Theatre.

Harry Rapf, producer, arranged a deal whereby he could film the $50,000 Hollywood Gold Cup in which the field is headed by Seabiscuit, for the "straight" race in the film.

Racing fans have an opportunity to see Dauber, Specify, Indian Broom and Lloyd Pan in the picture, which stars Wallace Beery and Mickey Rooney.

Clever Stars at Capitol

"Off the Record" Is a Lively Newspaper Yarn

Rarely have those two reliable entertainers, Pat O'Brien and Joan Blondell, been seen to better advantage than they are in their latest co-starring vehicle for Warner Bros., titled "Off the Record," which will show for the last time Monday night at the Dominion Theatre. A lively newspaper yarn with a truly novel twist, it is exciting entertainment for the whole family.

Much of the plot revolves round Joan and Pat's relationship with Bobby Jordan, erstwhile "Angel" of the "Dead End" gang, who himself contributes a characterization that stands up well with the two fine portrayals given by the stars.

Bobby is seen as the typical underprivileged youngster of the slum streets, who runs afoul the law because there is no one interested in seeing that he gets a square break in the world or learns what is right and what is wrong.

The screen play, an excellently paced and wittily written piece of work, was based by Niven Busch, Lawrence Kimble and Earl Baldwin on an original story by Saul Elkins and Sally Sandlin.

WISHBONE WILL OPEN ON TUESDAY

Miss A. M. Richards Will Reopen Dining-Room Under New Name At 707½ Yates Street

Miss A. M. Richards, who until recently owned the Cowichan Bay Inn, has now secured new premises which open Tuesday under the name of The Wishbone. Located at 707½ Yates Street, these upstairs rooms have been converted into an attractive dining-room where all meals will be served, together with a bridge room and a private dining-room for the accommodation of parties. Not the least of the charm of the former establishment was the beautiful genuine antique furnishings with which the dining-room was arranged. These are again in evidence, forming a tasteful setting in which the delicious breakfasts, lunches, teas, dinners and after-theatre suppers will be served.

DESTRUCTION OF TREES

Sir,—It is high time that the taxpayers of this city took some concerted action in order to preserve the beauty of our boulevards and parks from further despoliation. The removal of trees has been going on for several years, and if allowed to continu much longer, the far-famed beauty of Victoria will be a thing for reminiscence only. I feel that a public meeting of citizens should be called to draw up a protest against the ruthless butchery of trees now going on in our city.

The reason given by the chairman of the parks committee for this vandalism, according to an announcement in the press recently, is that the roots of trees interfere with drains and cause breakage of sidewalks and pavements. That this is not a valid excuse is apparent from the fact that many trees have been chopped down during the last ten years in Beacon Hill Park where no drains or pavements are endangered. If Mr. Okell's statement can be proved to be applicable in any part of the city, and I have yet to see where this condition exists, it has probably been brought about by the prevalent practice of lopping off the branches of trees, thus causing undue growth of the roots. Trees have got to have growth, and if their natural growth upward is artificially stunted by such drastic and unwarranted mutilation, the tendency is to grow excessively underground. Upon Bank Street for the last two years gangs of men have appeared in the Spring and have cut off the big top branches of trees until now their beauty is largely a thing of the past. Now I see from an announcement in the press that every other tree on several streets is slated for removal. For one who has lived here for over a quarter of a century, it is very painful to stand idly by and watch the ruthless butchery of trees now going on, especially those beautiful chestnut trees on Yates Street, between Cook and Fort Streets. How long are we, as taxpayers and citizens, going to allow this sort of thing to continue? The many protests appearing in the daily press go unheeded by the city authorities, so far as doing anything to put a stop to this practice. Mr. J. A. Worthington's statement, in voicing his lone protest against the action of the council in sanctioning this desecration, is very commendable.

It is to be hoped that the letter of the Hon. Mr. Justice Archer Martin, with regard to the preservation of the two greens on Bastion Street, will be given consideration by the municipal authorities, and further than that, that they will give heed to the voices of the many citizens who have made their feelings about this whole matter known in no uncertain terms, and that they will reverse their present policy of wholesale destruction and mutilation of trees before it is too late to do anything about it.

IN BARCELONA

Sir—Mr. Munro seems to be surprised and disappointed because, when Barcelona fell, General Franco fed the citizens instead of executing them. The answer is, of course, that Franco is a gentleman, exactly as were our own Generals Gordon, Roberts, Kitchener, Haig and other generals too numerous to mention. As to the refugees, not one woman, child or aged man need have left home. The Reds fled, and left their families in the lurch, having probably told them beforehand about a fanciful massacre of the innocents. The only act of vandalism committed by Franco's soldiers seems to be burning of the palatial syndicalists headquarters, but in reality a Government of Proletariat Dictatorship. In future, Spain will have one head, not ten thousand swelled heads. Incidentally, in all conquered territory in Spain, Franco has left behind him a contented peasantry and workers. WALTER FOSTER.

ANNUAL VESTRY MEETING HELD

Church Committee for Year Elected by St. Martin's-In-the-Field

The annual vestry meeting of St. Martin's-in-the-Field was held recently. The rector, Rev. Canon Stocken, gave a general report of the work of the parish during the past year.

The people's warden, Mr. Hartnell, presented the financial statement, which showed that greater support had been given the church during the past year; all accounts had been paid, leaving a small credit balance.

The rector's warden, Mr. Gilbert, reported on the success of the duplex envelope system, showing that the missions had been well supported without drawing on the ordinary finances of the church.

Mrs. Knight presented the report of the Women's Guild, and Miss Dora Stocken the report of the Sunday School. Mrs. Butterfield read an interesting report of the Mothers' Union.

Mrs. George McGregor read a report of the Ruridecanal conference. Miss Holmes read the report of the Evening Branch of the Woman's Auxiliary, which showed this branch to be a very real help in the work of the church. Miss Cooper, secretary of the Girls' Branch of the W.A., gave an interesting report on the activities of this branch.

FIRST ANNUAL REPORT

The first annual report of the A.Y.P.A. was of great interest, and was followed by a discussion as to alterations to the hall for their benefit.

The Little Helpers' secretary, Miss E. Tate, reported on this branch of the W.A.

Votes of thanks were passed to the ladies of the Altar Guild, to Mrs. Gilbert, organist; Mrs. Boam, choir leader; and members of the choir. It was pleasing to note very definite improvement in the church music during the past year.

The following were elected to the church committee for the current year:

William Gilbert and W. C. Hartnell, wardens; Capt. Corry Wood, vestry clerk; H. A. Rogers, representing Scout committee; J. E. Leggett, the A.Y.P.A.; Mrs. Gilbert and Mrs. Boam, the guild; Mrs. McGregor, the Sunday school; Miss Connie Holmes, the Evening W.A.; Miss Mary Burns and Miss May Jamieson, the Girls' W.A.; Mrs. Knight and Mrs. Leggett.

Journey Through Europe Told in Lantern Lecture

As an interesting background to every-day reading of affairs in Europe, Miss Hilda Hesson, Winnipeg, who has traveled extensively in European countries, and is at present making a speaking tour of Western Canada, gave a travel lecture to a large audience in the Memorial Hall last night. The meeting was arranged under the auspices of the Men's Parish Guild of Christ Church Cathedral, and H. H. Smith acted as chairman.

With the aid of a wide variety of colored lantern slides, Miss Hesson took her audience on a journey through France, Spain, Italy, Switzerland, Austria, Hungary, Czecho-Slovakia, and Holland, giving interesting descriptions of the principal cities, historical features and customs of the different countries.

At the conclusion of her talk, Miss Hesson was cordially thanked by Herbert Anscomb, M.P.P.

How Women in Their 40's Can Attract Men

Here's good advice for a woman during her change (usually from 38 to 52), who fears she'll lose her appeal to men, who worries about hot flashes, loss of pep, dizzy spells, upset nerves and moody spells.

Just get more fresh air, 8 hrs. sleep and if you need a reliable "WOMAN'S" tonic take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made especially for women. It helps Nature build up physical resistance, thus helps give more vivacity to enjoy life and assist calming jittery nerves and those disturbing symptoms that often accompany change of life.

Nelson Sisters Being Billeted In Local Homes

The three Nelson sisters, known professionally as The Canadian Trio, who are to give a recital here on Monday, February 20, under the auspices of the National Council of Education, will spend that weekend in the city, and will see more typical community life than many of the artist visitors who come here for so short a time. Arrangements have been made for the girls to be billeted in private homes. Zara, the 'cellist, will be the guest of Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Hinton, Beach Drive; Ida, the violinist, will stay with Mrs. Curtis Sampson at Molton Combe, Newport Avenue; and Anna, the pianist, will be with Miss C. I. Alexander, St. David Street. Mr. and Mrs. Hinton will give a tea in their honor on Saturday, February 18; and Mrs. Sampson will entertain the following afternoon.

In addition to their recital at the Empress on Monday evening, the girls will give a programme at the Victoria High School on Monday afternoon. On Tuesday they will probably pay a visit to one of the Up-Island schools before leaving.

SUNDAY SCHOOL SOCIAL

Following a short business meeting on Friday evening, the teachers of St. Mary's Sunday school held a social during which Mrs. V. M. Burrows was presented with a Bible as "a mark of appreciation for many years of faithful and devoted work in the school." In making the presentation, Archdeacon Nunns referred to the splendid work Mrs. Burrows had done with the girls of the Junior W.A. Mrs. Burrows also received a lovely bouquet of carnations presented to her by Miss Vera Woods, the youngest member of the Sunday school staff. A most enjoyable evening was spent in games and community singing, and the committee which arranged the programme received great praise.

ST. COLUMBA'S CHOIR

The choir of St. Columba's, Strawberry Vale, were entertained on Thursday evening by Mr. and Mrs. E. Boydell, at their home on Wilkinson Road, and a most enjoyable evening was spent in games and dancing. Later, refreshments were served by the hostess. Those present included Mr. and Mrs. W. Haley, Mrs. J. Hines, Mrs. G. Watling, and the Misses Norma Stacey, Nonnie Mannix, Enid Walker, Grace Sinclair, Pamela Mudie, Jessie Lahmer, Helen Cudmore, Molly Raper, Goldie and Victoria Rodman, Ida Reikki and Mona Watling.

PLANNING A DANCE

Associated Radio Technicians of British Columbia (Victoria section) will meet at 1218 Langley Street tomorrow evening at 8 o'clock. It is expected that final arrangements will be made for a dance to be held some time this month. J. Willcox will be the speaker.

A MAN OF STRAW

A straw man is a "dummy." He holds a particular position in name only. He is a flesh-and-blood man, too, though in that respect he differs from the straw man of the days of old, when the discarded clothing of a hated nobleman would be stuffed out with excelsior and suspended from a tree, in lieu of the fellow the people would have liked to hang.

Perhaps the closest counterpart of the man of straw that originated the expression is in the cheap criminal who "takes the rap" for a higher-up.

This method of shielding the real author of violations of law is not a modern innovation; it was an established institution in England as far back as the sixteenth century, and long before in ancient Greece.

The man of straw of yesterday would loiter about the Westminster courts. In his boots he displayed the badge of his curious calling, a wisp of straw, which identified him to lawyers who, to bolster up a weak cause, needed a perjuror or two.

It was perfectly safe to expose the man of straw to prosecution or to have him go bail—on straw bail, as the saying came to be.

Being utterly irresponsible, no damages could be collected from him; at best—or worst—he could only be supported at public expense while the undisclosed perpetrator kept the sleep of the good at bay.

MORE UNION MEN GO OUT

Seattle Metal Trades Council Enters Dispute With Steamship Companies

SEATTLE, Feb. 4 (AP).—Another union entered the two-day-old Alaska shipping controversy today and threatened to throw a picket line around the closed West Seattle yards of the Alaska Transportation Company where 300 men were thrown out of work.

The Seattle Metal Trades Council said it would start picketing some time today. The yards were closed yesterday. The council charged a "lockout."

The shipping dispute between three companies and the Masters, Mates and Pilots Union over wages and working conditions already has tied up two ships. Four more are posted to arrive from Alaska within a week. Ships were not picketed and members of the union said they walked off the ships but allowed discharge of cargo.

The steamships Mt. McKinley, of the Alaska Steamship Company, and the North Coast, of the Northland Transportation Company, are tied up, with the steamship Cordova posted to arrive Sunday. The steamer Tongrass arrives Monday.

The tieup, shipping executives said, would soon create a shortage of fresh fruits and vegetables in Alaska but would not affect staple goods supplies for some time.

SHORT OF SUPPLIES

JUNEAU, Alaska, Feb. 4 (AP).—Grocers in this capital city, cut off from direct steamer contact with the United States because of a labor dispute in Seattle, reported today fresh fruits and vegetables would be exhausted by Monday.

Merchants said the walkout in Seattle that tied up northbound shipping, came so suddenly that they were caught short on supplies as stocks usually run low at this time of the year.

Fresh meats may be exhausted by Tuesday, they reported, and supplies of bacon might last until Wednesday or Thursday.

Butter and egg supplies may not last over the week-end, grocers said.

Several merchants attempted to borrow from others for a heavy Saturday trade by frantic housewives.

Outlying districts also reported shortages.

Grocers pointed out that steamer sailing from Seattle on Fridays and Saturdays usually bring heavy supplies on their arrival on Tuesdays.

The tieup of two ships and the expected walkout on four others posted to arrive in Seattle soon from Alaska, resulted from a wage dispute between three steamship companies and the Masters, Mates and Pilots Union.

Four Destroyers Leave San Pedro On Way to Canal

INFORMATION released at Esquimalt Naval Yard last night stated that the destroyers, Ottawa, Fraser, St. Laurent and Restigouche, after visiting several days at the United States naval base, San Pedro, are now on their way to Panama. The ships will make no further calls on the way to the Canal.

PURCHASE SHIP FOR SCRAPPING

Capital Iron & Metals Bringing Tanker Impoco Here Next Tuesday

Capital Iron & Metals Limited, of Store Street, announced last night it had purchased the Imperial Oil Company's tanker Impoco for scrapping.

Morris L. Greene, manager of the company, later stated that the vessel was at present at Ioco, and would be brought to Victoria on Tuesday of this week.

Island Tug & Barge Company has contracted to tow the tanker here. Two tugs will leave for Vancouver tomorrow, and the Impoco will be docked at Capital Iron & Metals wharf, Upper Harbor, where she will be dismantled and broken up for scrap iron.

The Impoco, ex-Minoka, is 200 feet long, with a registered gross tonnage of 796 tons. She was latterly employed freighting oil between Ioco and points along the British Columbia Coast. Capital Iron & Metals expect the Impoco to produce about 600 tons of scrap metal.

REDUCE FARES ON RAILROADS

Canadian Lines Offer Special Inducements During End of Month Period

Commencing February 18 and continuing until March 4, Canadian National and Canadian Pacific Railways will offer residents of British Columbia greatly reduced fares to points in Eastern Canada — Armstrong, Port Arthur, and beyond, according to J. B. Parker, secretary, Canadian Passenger Association, Winnipeg.

With return limit of forty-five days, a long visit back east at attractive low fares is a decided inducement for early Spring travelers.

Stopover privileges apply to Winnipeg and stations east of that city. Children five years of age and under twelve will travel at half the adult fare.

Bargain tickets will be honored in all classes of equipment, including the new air-conditioned coaches, tourist and standard sleepers. Usual berth charges will be assessed for accommodation used.

Similar low fares will also be effective from Eastern Canada to British Columbia during the same period.

PROSPECTS of obtaining steady employment and learning useful trades, as well as being in a position to do their "bit" for democracy should the need arise, continues to attract young men from British Columbia to Britain. Nine lads are leaving New York before the middle of February with the hope of being accepted for service on arrival in London. All these boys have been aided in making their preliminary arrangements by Captain H. Seymour-Biggs, of Victoria who, while not acting in any official capacity, is interested in helping the boys find a niche where they can help themselves as well as be of service to the Empire if ever needed. Hoy, Leason, Jakeman, Whittingham and Watson are from Victoria; Page, from Duncan; Roberts, from Courtenay, and Robertson, from Cumberland. William V. Hardman, of Naramata, B.C., the ninth member to leave, did not forward photograph in time for inclusion in the above group.—Ros Weller Studio photographs.

LINER PASSED IN

Inbound to Vancouver from Japan ports, the Nippon Yusen Kaisha Ms. Helan Maru reached William Head at noon yesterday. The Helan Maru had sixty-two passengers in all classes for Vancouver and Seattle. Canadian cargo amounted to 1,975 tons. William Harold, of the local Great Northern Railway office, boarded the liner at Quarantine and proceeded to the Mainland port aboard her.

LUMBER VESSELS

The freighter Northleigh docked alongside Ogden Point Piers at 2 o'clock yesterday morning. She is loading 700,000 feet of lumber for the United Kingdom. King Brothers expect to get her away tomorrow. Coming in from Union Bay, the freighter Gemstone was expected to arrive alongside the assembly plant overnight to take on lumber cargo for the British Isles.

German cargo carrier Isar arrived from Everett at the Ogden Point Piers yesterday and started loading fish oil from Canadian National tanks.

MILL BAY FERRY

Granted a subsidy of $4,000 by the Provincial Government, the Brentwood-Mill Bay ferry will resume regular service tomorrow, G. B. Williams, of the Cascade Freight & Towing Company, announced last night. The Ms. Cascade will be operated under Winter schedule, as follows: Leave Brentwood at 9, 10, 2, 4 and 5; leave Mill Bay at 9:30, 10:30, 3:30, 4:30 and 5:30.

PASSENGER LINERS

Two trans-Pacific passenger liners are due to reach Victoria this week. On Thursday night or Friday morning, the Canadian-Australasian Ss. Niagara, Captain W. Martin, will be arriving from Australia via South Sea ports; and on Saturday, the Canadian Pacific liner Ss. Empress of Japan, Captain L. D. Douglas, R.N.R., will be arriving from Hongkong, China and Japanese ports.

SCRAP METAL BILL

A bill intended to stop shipments of pig iron, scrap iron and scrap steel to both China and Japan was introduced in the House at Washington last week by Representative Hamilton Fish, New York. His action was based, he said, on newspaper reports that three ships were loading scrap iron at Los Angeles for shipment to Japan. He added that this would be used for military purposes. Junk dealers at the Southern port declared some time ago that the scrap material consigned to Japan was unfit for the manufacture of war materials and was intended only for structural purposes.

Second Chorus Girl (sweetly): "About $100,000, wasn't it?"

Making Study of Factors Relating To Shipping Here

B. A. Johnson, Stockholm, son of the owner of the Johnson Line, which operates a fleet of combined passenger and freight vessels between Sweden and British Columbia, arrived in Victoria yesterday and will spend a few days in the city.

Mr. Johnson is visiting the principal ports of the province for the purpose of making a study of the factors and conditions governing shipping operations, and expects to spend about two months in Vancouver.

STANDARD FARES FOR TRANS-CANADA LINES RELEASED THIS WEEK

In connection with advices published in yesterday morning's issue of The Colonist pertaining to passenger fares, which will go into effect on Trans-Canada Air Lines planes, it was stated the standard fare would be ten cents a mile. It is now requested that a correction be made. The news service states that "the rate published in The Canada Gazette is not notice of maximum price for one-way trip. Standard rates will be announced next week."

CALGARY TAKES LOSS

CALGARY, Feb. 4 (CP).—As a result of the Alberta Government's arbitrary reduction of interest rates on about 50 per cent of Alberta Government securities held by trust funds and the sinking fund of Calgary, the city has lost $68,479 from June 1, 1936, up to December 31, 1938, F. A. Buchan, city treasurer, said.

Market Leaders Climb Upward On Wall Street

NEW YORK, Feb. 4 (AP).—Stock market leaders ended the week on an upward slant in today's brief session.

Virtually all groups participated in the resumption of the recovery push, with gains running to 2 or more points at the best. A little profit-taking at the close reduced top marks in most cases.

The Associated Press average of 60 stocks was up .4 of a point at 50.4. On the week this composite showed a net gain of 2.3 points, its best performance since the week ending October 8. The comeback followed four consecutive weekly declines.

Volume picked up a bit on the forward swing, with transfers for the two hours totaling 486,160 shares against 582,530 a week ago. The week's turnover, however, was the smallest since the period ending September 10, amounting roughly to 4,000,000 shares compared with some 7,000,000 in the preceding week.

Among the day's favored issues were Bethlehem Steel, Chrysler, U.S. Rubber, Sears Roebuck, Safeway Stores, J. I. Case, Glenn Martin, Sperry, North American, Public Service of N.J., American Smelting, Westinghouse, Du Pont, Eastman Kodak, U.S. Gypsum, and Sante Fe.

Small buying orders were enough to keep the rise in the bond market going today under momentum of the recovery which continued most of the week.

The buying was attributed partly to hopes for resumption of industrial expansion as Spring approaches.

United States Treasury and most foreign loans were mixed in a narrow market. Belgium 6's were marked up a point.

GETTING CUSTOMERS AND GOODS TOGETHER

Ordinarily there wouldn't be any news in the fact that a New York chain of high-grade candy stores advertised for women clerks. What aroused comment was the specification that the clerks must be tall. When asked why, a store manager explained that they wanted saleswomen tall enough to see over the tops of the display-packed showcases, the store's best selling space.

The same principle has been used in the stores of an Illinois grocery company. Their canned goods department has shelving seven feet high, placed along one side of the store. It is so arranged that customers can easily pick the cans off the shelves—and by so doing, sell themselves.

A shoe dealer in Texas uses the idea in a different way. He loads a tea wagon with shoe-buckles, arranged under glass where the customer can see them easily. The wagon is rolled right in front of the customer so that selection is made easy.

In a Cleveland department store sales of electric bulbs were increased 250 per cent in a week by displaying them on the main floor and advertising them in newspapers. Previously they had not been a profitable item. More than that—the total yearly sales of light bulbs jumped from about $1,500 to 7,500 after this display was begun.

WHEAT FUTURES IN NARROW MOVE

WINNIPEG, Feb. 4 (CP).—Futures prices moved narrowly in a dull session on Winnipeg Grain Exchange today. At the close wheat prices were unchanged to 1-4 cent lower.

Indications of a little export purchasing of Canadian wheat appeared near the end of the session when final figures showed May at 62 3-4, July 63 1-2 and October 63 3-4.

World markets generally were dull with Chicago showing a soft tone and Buenos Aires unchanged. Traders ignored sales of United States Pacific wheat to Russia. Liverpool closed 1-2 to 1-4d lower.

Interest in cash wheat and coarse grains was at a standstill. Spreads in most grades remained unchanged.

CONVENTION DATE SET

TORONTO, Feb. 4 (CP).—Annual convention of the Canadian Produce Association will be held in Montreal February 6 and 7 under presidency of W. A. Landreth of Winnipeg. Trade and agricultural officials of Dominion and Provincial Governments are expected to attend.

Jane Dixon Says:

A WOMAN WHO ENCOURAGES HER SON TO NEGLECT HIS WIFE AND HOME IS A DISGRACE TO HERSELF AND HER COMMUNITY.

How fortunate are those of us who can look back upon mother as a shining example of goodness and gentleness.

It takes the horrible example—the other kind of mother—the one who not only fails to guide her child into the paths of good, but actually aids and abets that child in pursuit of evil; it takes such a creature to make us appreciate the precious gifts of a real mother.

Jane Dixon: Sometimes my husband seems to think a lot of me and of our baby, at other times he just doesn't seem to care.

What would you think of a husband who stays out half the night or all night without telling me he intends to do it? We have our home and a baby girl, and we own a car. Night after night he doesn't come home to supper, though I have it ready for him. When I ask him where he has been he says: "Having a good time" or "at mother's."

I wouldn't mind him going to his mother's, but they have drinking parties there and I don't approve of it. Also, a certain girl comes to his mother's home every night. He tries to fool me, tells me he doesn't care for her; but he must, or he wouldn't stay half the night in her company.

I have left him hoping this would bring him to his senses, but it only made things worse between us. You see, Miss Dixon, his mother encourages him in this affair. She is a divorced woman and a heavy drinker. She thinks it is all right for him to act as he does. But the baby and I come first. Don't you agree?

I want to keep our home together, and I've prayed my husband would straighten up, but I'm about convinced he never will. Ours was a love marriage, but his people have come between us. I've talked with his mother about the way he is doing, but she thinks it is o.k., and tells me I should let him have his fun. I am in great distress. Please help me.—"Steady Reader."

Comment: You are indeed unfortunate to have married a man with such a background. There seems very little you can do under the circumstances except to take some definite and legal action—such as a separation which would give you custody of your child and compel him to make provision for both of you.

A woman who provides a means for her son to neglect his home and his family is unworthy the name of mother. She is a disgrace to herself, her son and her community. You will have to deal with both of them firmly!

B.C. LINES UP FOREST GUARDS

Register of Men and Equipment Arranged in Conjunction With Industry

The British Columbia Forest Branch began its annual survey of fire-fighting equipment and needs last week, arranging, through the co-operation of the logging industry, for a register of tractors, trucks, pumps and possible fire-fighting crews in each of the main logging areas on Vancouver Island.

This year, co-ordination in advance of the fire season is being counted on to assist the quick response necessa., at the inception of a major outbreak of fire n the timbered areas. Major logging operators conferred with the service during the week, and promised customary assistance in a joint solution of the problem.

The Forest Branch arranged at the same time with grocers and supply houses for the commisariat needs of actual fire-fighting crews, when they take the field.

Further meetings will take place to round out the wh plan, C. D. Orchard, assistant chief forester, said.

CITY MAY ENTER LIGHT BUSINESS

Acquisition of Goldstream Power Plant to Be Discussed on Monday Night

A recommendation of the franchise committee that the sum of $450,000 be borrowed to acquire the B.C. Electric Railway Company, Ltd., hydro-electric plant at Goldstream, construct a new power station there, erect a transmission line to the city, and carry out preliminary work for a steam plant at the foot of Herald Street, will be considered at a meeting of the City Council on Monday night at 8 o'clock.

Under terms of an agreement with the B.C. Electric, which expired last June, the city is obliged to take over the Goldstream substation at a price to be agreed upon by arbitration. R. W. Beck, public utilities adviser to the council, recommended that the city pay the company a price not exceeding $19,200.

PAINTING WORK

Under the heading of general business, the council will be asked by the British Columbia Agricultural Association to provide $2,158 to paint the grandstand at Willows Park, stain the Manufacturers', Women's and Main Buildings, paint the ticket office, and alter electrical wiring in the stables.

Alderman B. J. Gadsden, chairman of the public market committee, will suggest to the council that A. H. McPherson be a pointed licensed auctioneer for a p iod of one year in connection with sales by auction in the market yard, and that he be charged $7.50 per month office rent.

He will also recommend that Mr McPherson be allowed to fence off two stalls at his own expense, and that the city building inspector construct a battery of chicken coops at a cost not to exceed $49. Mr McPherson would be asked to pay at least 1 per cent of his weekly receipts for use of the coops.

BUSINESS REASONS

Alderman Gadsden will explain that in the interests of efficiency and economy, Major M. Kirkpatrick Crockett be relieved of his duties as market superintendent, weighmaster, and fair weights and measures officer. He would continue in the capacity of lands commissioner, a position requiring all his attention with the increased sales of reverted property.

He will suggest that F. Collier, scales clerk, be appointed weighmaster and market superintendent, and that an assistant on a part-time basis be employed to assist Mr. Collier. The assistant would receive $50 per month.

In conclusion, Alderman Gadsden will recommend that the finance committee consider the appointment of a fair weights and measures officer, to commence his duties on April 1.

The alderman will point out that the reallocation of positions would save the city money, and also increase efficiency of the branches concerned.

FIST FIGHTS AT HOCKEY GAME

Players and Fans Get Into Battle as Portland Scores Victory

PORTLAND, Ore., Feb. 4 (AP).—Portland Buckaroos clawed out a 4-3 victory over Spokane Clippers in a fast, rough Pacific Coast Hockey League game tonight. Fights—in the stands and on the ice—highlighted the game.

The fireworks started in the first period when Frew, of the Clippers, and Gilmour, of Portland, tangled. They collided on the boards and Gilmour hit the ice. Some stick work to the head by Frew sent both players off the ice for the remainder of the game under match penalties.

The penalties left both teams with only five men on the ice for the next twenty minutes—eleven minutes of it in the second period.

First Period—1, Portland, Holmes (Ouellette-Conn), 4:35. Penalties: Frew (match), Gilmour (match).

Second Period—2, Spokane, McAdam (Ripley), 4:55; 3, Spokane, Ripley (Lennon), 5:50; 4, Portland, Conn (Sutherland), 8:08; 5, Portland, Webster (Sutherland-McCartney), 17:51. Penalties: Sutherland.

Third Period—6, Spokane, McAdam (Merrill-Kenny), 5:48; 7, Portland, Conn (unassisted), 15:35. Penalties—Kenny, Sutherland (2), Lennon.

GIVES FIGURES ON MUNITIONS EXPORTS

OTTAWA, Feb. 4 (CP).—Canada exported arms and ammunition, including airplanes and airplane parts, to both China and Japan during 1938, Hon. J. L. Ilsley, Minister of Revenue, told Tom Reid (Lib., New Westminster) in the Commons today. The exports to China, however, greatly exceeded those to Japan.

Figures produced showed that during the year 101 permits were issued to export $602,270 worth of war material to China. Only two permits, valued at $43,550, represented exports of war material in that class to Japan.

GIVES ADDRESS ON CONSTITUTION

"The Constitution of Canada" was the subject of an address given by W. H. M. Haldane, president of the Victoria Conservative Association, before a meeting of Young Conservatives in the Campbell Building last night.

The speaker described the historical events leading up to the signing of the British North America Act, on which, he said, Canada's Constitution was based. He also spoke of Confederation and the problems which confronted those who brought the provinces together.

Mr. Haldane dealt with the Rowell Commission and the need for changes in the British North America Act.

E. E. Richards showed 150 lantern slides on the subject of "The British Empire." The views principally concerned London and the Mediterranean.

The next meeting of the organization will be held on February 17, at which time it is proposed to discuss a play which is in charge of the dramatics group, under the chairmanship of A. F. Walker.

NO. 47—EIGHTY-FIRST YEAR VICTORIA, BRITISH COLUMBIA, SUNDAY, FEBRUARY, 5, 1939

Tests for ISLAND MOTORISTS

FOR some months the public of British Columbia have been reading in the newspapers of the preparations being made by the Provincial Police for the examination of motor vehicle drivers. In the interests of safety it was deemed necessary to tighten the regulations governing the fitness of drivers of automobiles, trucks, buses and motorcycles to operate such vehicles on the public thoroughfares. Now the day has come when the drivers are being examined. The fact that they hold driver's licences, issued under old standards, soon will not be enough; they will be required to have passed new tests in order to validate their licences.

Examination of drivers has been underway in Vancouver and New Westminster for several weeks. Examination started in Victoria last Monday. Eventually tests will be held in other centres throughout the province until all drivers have been approved or rejected under the regulations required for the new and higher standards. At present examination is voluntary on the part of the driver, but in due course, when the volunteers have been tested, the non-volunteers will be ordered to appear for examination under pain of automatic suspension of their licences if they fail to present themselves within a reasonable time. So, sooner or later, all holders of driver's licences will have been examined.

There has been considerable apprehension regarding the new examinations. Drivers can think of a thousand and one ways in which they might be failed by the examiners. There is something of that dread about it all that cropped up from time to time in school days. Examinations are something that most persons do their best to forget, and when they rear their hydra-headed forms again they create misgivings of all sorts. However, such suffering and mental anguish is quite needless for the current driver's tests are educational and interesting rather than inquisitional. They are not difficult and they are not designed to put drivers off the roads. The only person who will come to real grief is the one who probably is fully aware that he or she has no right to attempt to operate a motor vehicle because of serious physical infirmity. All others will find that if they have certain shortcomings they will be given every assistance possible to eliminate handicaps and thus make their driving safer for themselves and others on the highways.

The Restricted Licence

THE writer makes these assertions in the light of experience. He was among the first tested in Victoria, and was the first to receive a restricted driver's licence. The face of his licence has had these words stamped on it: "Examined (19) Restricted (See Reverse)" and the back of the licence says "Restricted to Driving with Adequate Eyeglasses." This means that the writer must not operate a motor vehicle unless he is wearing his glasses, and if he was caught doing so he would be operating without a licence and subject to the penalties therefor. It sounds like a drastic restriction of his liberties, but actually it is not. Although he is semi-blind without his eyeglasses, his eyesight is perfect with them and consequently he is never without them. He has never driven a car without his glasses anyway, so there is no hardship. He will have lots of company in his category before the tests are completed and his companions will include those who know that they must wear adequate eyeglasses and others who never realize how imperfect was their vision.

2—Testing width of vision with perimeter.
3—Chief examiner Corpl. A. O. Cooke explains procedure to two candidates at desk of clerks in charge of the written test.
4—Motor car drivers answering written questions.

To start at the beginning of things, the candidate for examination presents himself at the motor vehicles office of the Provincial Police in the old Drill Hall on Menzies Street. He appears first before two young ladies in a room where there is a score of small desks. One of the young ladies takes his driver's licence and ask for one dollar, the fee for the examination and the only payment required should the candidate pass the first time or be required to make several attempts. He is given a receipt and handed an examination paper containing twenty-five questions. Seating himself at one of the desks he proceeds to answer the questions, ticking "yes" or "no" for most of them and marking one of three figures where the question calls for an answer in feet, inches or candlepower as the case may be.

Should Read Driver's Manual

THE examination paper may be any one of ten picked up at random by the examination clerk. All questions asked on all the tests appear in the Motor Vehicle Driver's Manual, obtained for the asking from the Provincial Police. The manual gives the correct answer to each of 251 questions, and twenty-five or these are on each examination paper. The candidate fails if six or more questions are answered incorrectly or not at all. In other words, eighty per cent is the minimum pass mark.

The questions are neither difficult nor tricky, and a reasonable amount of study of the manual is all that is necessary for success. In Vancouver it has been found that about one in ten candidates fail the written examination the first time, and it is safe to estimate that ninety-five per cent of those have not read the manual. No one who has failed the written test the first time has failed on the second attempt. Anyone who passes, while he may regard some of the questions as ridiculous and unnecessary, will have a reasonable knowledge of driving rules, which is what is intended.

The questions answered (most people will do so in about ten minutes) the candidate returns to the clerk's desk where the paper is quickly marked. She has a piece of celluloid perforated so that the correct markings on the test paper appear through the perforations and other markings can be seen through the celluloid. In a few seconds she is able to determine the result of the test and mark the percentage on the form accordingly.

At the Reactometer

SUCCESSFUL in the written examination, the candidate proceeds to another room where a police constable ushers him to the reactometer. This is a dummy driver's seat with steering wheel, clutch and brake pedals and a foot accelerator. The candidate made comfortable by adjusting the equipment to suit his physical dimensions, the examination starts. The candidate quickly learns that the officer in charge wishes to be as helpful as possible in something the attitude of a teacher rather than as a suspicious interrogator seeking to trip a victim into errors.

The first test is identification of standard warning signs. The driver is handed a card and is asked to explain in a few words the message that is conveyed by different signs. Everyone who has driven is familiar with most of them and has no difficulty in explaining the necessary eight of the ten signs among the group which are considered essential.

The next step is to test the vision of the driver. Twenty feet in front of the reactometer there is a well-lighted sign with the assortment of capital letters in various sizes. The examiner determines the smallest row of letters which the driver is able to read clearly with both eyes and with each eye. If the driver wears glasses the test is repeated with the candidate wearing these aids to vision. In the writer's case he could read the smallest letters with the use of his glasses and not even the largest without them.

The test for diplopia is the next. This consists of looking at a small white light through a piece of optical equipment. If the driver has normal vision a red light appears in the immediate vicinity of the white light, and if he has double vision the red light will appear to be at a considerable distance from the white.

Width of Vision

Tin Cups

By Lew Dietz

"YOU'RE all right, Jock," he repeated softly to himself. "Just down a little fine maybe. Just a little fine."

He stood with his dark close-cropped head forward, allowing the needling jets of the shower to beat at the base of his neck, relaxing his singing nerves. He looked down to his taped knee, flexed it a little. It was just a bit stiff, that was all. He'd be all set to go in the morning.

Turning off the taps, he stepped out on the white tile, groping for a towel. As he started rubbing down, Bill Lauch's round, grinning face poked in. "Good going, Jock, but I don't mind telling you I was worried for a while this afternoon."

Jock straightened up, his grey eyes hardening. "You're in on it, too, eh?"

"Don't be an ape," Bill said. "All the dough I've got is saying you'll win tomorrow. You've been off a little since Seabright, but you'll take Phil tomorrow. And next week I'll lay odds that you'll walk through the Nationals at Forest Hills for your grand slam. Now forget it and come on down. Sheila's invited the flower of Southampton here tonight."

"I'll come down for a while."

Looking after Bill's retreating back, the bitterness took hold of him again. Sure, the whole chattering mob would tell him how good he was, how he couldn't lose; and all the while they were breaking their necks trying to get money on Phil Loomis. They thought he was through. They thought Phil Loomis had the Indian sign on him. And they were crazy. He'd just been a little stale at Seabright and Newport; he'd just been down a little fine. And when you're down your nerves are edgy, and when your nerves are ragged anything—even a chartreuse sweater in the stands—is apt to jar you . . .

He balled the towel in his big hands and slammed it into a corner. "Lay off it, you sap," he told himself savagely.

The kid had come up from nowhere. He'd come out of the West, blasting his way up the Southern circuit. He'd taken Creamer and Bower and Larry Biggs. But no one had ever thought he'd had a prayer of clipping Jock Dunn. But it had happened at Seabright and again at Newport. He'd been clicking smoothly that day at Seabright, spraying hard flat drives all over Phil's baselines. His nerves had been on edge, sure, but he had had everything under control. Then out of the corner of his eye he'd seen that flash of color. It had startled him for a moment because it was more than just the color. There was something about the girl's posture, something about the way she sat there, sleeves pushed up above her elbows, chin in her hands, that reminded Jock of someone he had known before he became a tennis player.

THE crowd was all there when he wandered down. They were standing in small groups talking tennis over cigarettes and cocktails. He had stopped to pass a word with Pop Markham and Fritz Heller when Sheila's hand touched his sleeve. "Jock, I don't think you've met Miss Travis."

He was half around before his mind took a hold on the words. It was too late then to throw up his guard. —

From a long way off she said calmly, "Hello, Jock . . . I knew Jock a long way back. I wasn't sure he'd remember me."

"Anne!"

She held his eyes for the briefest instant, then she laughed and shook her blonde head a little. "You look almost as though you expect me to evaporate, Jock. In front of all these people you might at least pretend I'm rather a pleasant ghost."

"I knew Anne in school," Jock said. "It's—it's been some time."

"Three years is a long time for a tennis player, I guess," Anne Travis said. "You've gone from a 'white hope' to veteran since I last saw you, Jock. It's good to see you again."

"Anne," he said, and stopped. He was still staring down at her, struggling to control his feelings, when Bill Lauch came weaving over with two cocktails and took her away.

It seemed a long time later that Sheila's voice jarred him back:

"The little red schoolhouse, Jock?"

"What? . . . oh: No, it wasn't so long ago as that. I knew her at the university. We used to dissect frogs together."

Amusement flickered in Sheila's blue eyes. "I'm relieved if that's all you had in common, Jock. And now, at the risk of shattering a sentimental mood, I'm going to suggest you have just one little touch of sherry and then tuck yourself in bed. You seem to have got over Seabright and Newport, but I don't want to take any chances. If you lose I won't be able to hold my head up around here. Not saying what it'll do to my pocketbook."

Jock said: "Sleep is all I need. I'll get a breath of fresh air, then get to bed. Excuse me, will you?"

The night was cool. He walked down off the porch, out across the lawn, past Pop Markham's prize dahlias, out beyond the pool and summerhouse. His bad knee began throbbing again. He stopped on the planked bridge over the brook, listening to the lugubrious thar-ump of a bull frog, trying desperately to drive the thing off.

The frog went thar-ump again. And the past kept swirling back in remembered smells and sounds and fragmentary visions. The smell of iodoform in the zinc-tabled lab. She was there in a daubed smock, a bright kerchief tied carelessly about her head to keep that errant hair of hers from tumbling over her eyes. And the smell of burning leaves as he'd hurried across the quad that early Spring evening, bursting with the news. She was with the crowd in the back of Jock's tavern.

"You're here to see my mug pushed into the dirt," he exclaimed. "But I'm going to fool you."

BARELY waiting to get her into a corner booth, he had blurted, "Annie—I'm going. Just got a letter from Dad."

And she was sitting there like that, sleeves pushed up, chin cupped in her hands. But it wasn't until a long time afterward that he remembered the shadow that crept across her face. He was going to the Bermuda Championships! There wasn't room for anything else in his mind.

After a while Anne said: "You still have a lot of work to make up before your graduation."

"Forget it, Anne. I can breeze through that stuff and you know it. Besides, I'm taking some books with me. I'll have plenty of time to do a little cramming once I get clipped."

"But what if you win?"

He chuckled at that, shaking his head. "I won't win, Annie. You can forget that, too. Do you realize the class I'll be up against?"

She didn't say much more about it then. It was on the way back across the campus that she stopped and turned slowly. "I don't want you to think I'm a kill-joy, Jock. And don't think I'm not proud of you. But you haven't forgotten all those things we've talked about. You—you want to be a great surgeon, don't you, Jock? You don't want to be the greatest tennis player in the world, do you?"

He laughed because it had seemed so funny. And then, because she was standing there so close and she looked so lovely, so genuinely troubled, he drew her into his arms. It had seemed so utterly natural that it was some time before either became aware that this had never happened before.

At last she had whispered, head close against his cheek: "If you do anything to spoil my plans for you, Jock Dunn, I'll haunt you to your grave."

He remembered how she looked that night as he held her away and gazed into her eyes. After a while he had said, "What a lovely little ghost you'd make, Annie. I'm almost tempted to try it."

Lord knows he'd never expected to get through to the finals that year at Bermuda. He couldn't quite remember how it had happened. Too much had happened down there. As he looked back, it was all a swirl of color, a confusion of crowd a hot fever of excitement. He remembered the great hand he'd got as he walked off the courts after losing in five furious sets to Henderson in the finals. Sheila was with her father in the governor's box. Pop Markham had introduced him to the governor.

All eyes were on him and Sheila as they sat side by side at the tennis banquet. "I've been watching you, Jock. I had my eye on you the first day you walked out on the court. You're coming to Southampton this year. I want to see you beat Henderson. I know you can do it."

HOW cocksure he'd been himself that he could do it. After all, a dozen sports writers couldn't be wrong. They were laying it on with a trowel. Just a little more seasoning on the Eastern circuit and he'd tie old Henderson in a knot, they were saying. And he had. But a lot had happened first.

He'd been invited to the Davis Cup try-outs, so he ducked back to school to take a quick stab at his examinations. He wanted to tuck his degree under his belt, then have that whole Summer free to campaign for the Nationals.

Anne Travis had seemed rather subdued and thoughtful during the weeks he was back in school. But his mind had been too full of the Summer ahead to wonder much about it. She said scarcely a word about his plans until that night before he left, as they sat together on the steps of Knowell's Hall.

She wore the sweater that night and she sat the way he best remembered her, her chin in her hands. "Then you're going to do it, Jock?" she said suddenly.

"Do it? You mean play the circuit this Summer? You bet your sweet life I am, honey. And what's more, I'm going to bring back that National Singles cup for you to drink beer out of."

"Jock——" Her voice was very low. "Jock, do you really want to give me a present? You can give me something I want more than anything in the world. Stay away. Give me a present of your chances to win the Nationals. You could win—I know you can do it, Jock, so it's yours to throw away. Will you throw it away for me?"

He stared at her blankly for a moment. "You think of the darnedest ideas, Annie. You aren't serious?"

"Look at me, Jock. Just look at me and you can't doubt that I'm serious. Throw it away for me, Jock. If it means nothing else, it's a way of telling me that I mean more to you than a piece of shiny tin."

"Gosh, honey, you know you do. If that's all you're afraid of——"

"Oh, it's not exactly that, Jock. Can't you see what I'm afraid of? I'm afraid because I know you so well. I know how you have to be great—how you must be best in whatever you do. I'm just afraid that, once you get the fever, you won't want to come back to four years of grinding at Med next Fall. They won't want to let you go, once you win the Nationals. They'll drug you, Jock. They'll dope you with cheers and pictures and oceans of newsprint. They'll keep you pounding the turf, filling their stadiums, winning their cups. They'll keep driving you on until you crack. Then they'll take the dope away and you'll wake up in a lot somewhere with a splitting headache and a basket of tinware."

"Will you give me that, Jock? Won't you promise?"

He didn't have a chance. "Honey," he had said warmly that night three years ago, "it's the cockeyedest gift I've ever heard of, but if you want it, it's yours. Doctor Dunn presents you with the cup he threw away with a blue ribbon tied around it."

The frob thar-umped again and something inside him started shouting. "Can it, Dunn. This isn't doing you any good. It was all just one of those sentimental kid things that come out in the first good wash. You're a tennis player now——"

HIS head snapped up. It was her voice through the trees, saying wearily, "All right, Bill, call me anything you please—but can't you stop following me? Can't you see I want to be alone for a while?"

"I've tried," Bill Lauch said sadly. "You see I'm jus' weak."

"You're just drunk."

"Sure," Bill admitted.

"Oh, jump in the brook!"

Jock stood there in the shadow, waiting for the splash. It came almost at once. He went over and looked down at Bill sitting disconsolately in a foot of water.

There was a low gasp beside him. "Oh, it's you, Jock. Thanks. Bill was quickly becoming a burden." She turned and added with a constrained brightness: "He spent most of the evening assuring me he was only twenty-six. He's at least thirty. Why is it, Jock, that tennis players and actresses underestimate their ages as much as they think they might get away with?"

He felt his jaw tightening. "I hadn't noticed it," he said. "You're staying here in town, Annie?"

"Yes, with Nell Potter's family. I finally got out last year, but we're both back for graduate work. Sheila was over this morning. She asked us if we'd like to meet the champion. I . . . I thought it might be—fun seeing you again, Jock."

"Was it—fun?" The words had come, edged with bitterness.

Her slight figure stiffened. The shadow was deep on her face, but he divined the swift change that came over her. "Jock, what is it? I hardly recognized you when I saw you tonight."

"I feel fine," he assured her.

"Jock, that's not true. You see, I heard about your slump——"

"Slump!"

She stopped dead and came around. "Don't you think I read the papers, Jock? I know what happened at Seabright and at Newport."

"So you read it in the papers, Annie." There was a roaring in his head and he knew it was coming. "You're lying, Annie! You were there in the stands. You meant that I should see you, didn't you? You wore that chartreuse sweater so I'd be sure to see you there."

"Jock!"

"It's true, isn't it? You figured that, after the strain of eight solid months of competition, it wouldn't take much to crack me. Now you're here to see the finishing touches put on. You're here to see my mug pushed into the dirt. But I'm going to fool you."

There was a crowd in the locker room when he got to the clubhouse that next afternoon. Phil Loomis sat there on a bench chewing gum, his sturdy brown legs showing under the polo coat draped over his shoulders.

"Nice guy," Tobey Hale said, shoving a thumb at Bill Lauch. "He wanted two to one on you, Jock. He's supposed to be a friend of yours."

"That's a lie," Bill protested. "At least I didn't expect to get it. You can't blame a guy for trying, can you——"

JOCK dumped his gear on the bench. He didn't say anything. He started getting out of his clothes. They were called a little while later and he and Phil started out to the court.

Jock won the toss. Presently they were ready. It was suddenly very still up there in the gallery. The umpire was standing up in his chair, announcing the match. Jock didn't look at him. He didn't look at the gallery. He stood just behind the baseline bouncing a ball. He knew she was somewhere in the crowd, but he tried to shut out of his consciousness everything but a little white ball. The umpire nodded. He glanced to where Loomis crouched, alert and ready. Setting his toe just behind the baseline, he gave his racket a steadying shake. His eyes swept over the gallery as he followed the ball into the sky. A dead, shuddering clack vibrated down his arm. The ball angled off the throat of his racket, striking the umpire's stand.

He looked again. His eyes went hunting through massed crowds. She was there, of course. She must be there. That sweater must be there somewhere. It was a color that stood out like a flare in the night.

"Fault," the umpire was saying.

Jock hiked up his slacks. He moistened his dry lips a little. He tossed the ball well back for plenty of spin. There was a hollow pang as he poured his weight against it. He heard the slap as it struck the net cord and rolled lazily back toward him.

He hit the next one with a vicious snap of his back. It came slashing back with a spin on it, breaking off the turf. He drove it away again and moved into the forecourt. There was a long, breathy ahhh from the crowd. Loomis had taken it rising and punched it past him.

He was at it again, running back and forth across the baseline. The crowd was still now. All the tenseness was gone from Loomis' face. He seemed almost lighthearted. His sturdy brown legs danced and his shoulder was rolling into them as he lined ball after ball into the back court.

Applause was spattering all around him again. It was a harsh, grating sound like pebbles in a tin bucket. The crowd was already scenting a new champion. Inside him everything began letting go. His knees began burning and hot, corroding bitterness sluiced through him. Let them have their new champion. Let the mob have Phil Loomis. Let Sheila and Pop Markham have him.

SO he had gone to the Nationals that first year. The game hadn't seen anything like him in years. The white fathers of the association had turned him over to a coach to clean off his volley and take the spin out of his backhand. So he'd won the Nationals with his little racket and they were all clucking around him like a pack of hungry hens.

And he'd brought back the cup that next year. There were bands and cameras and a parade down Broadway. He'd won everything there was to win in those two years. But that wasn't enough. He wanted them all in one year. He wanted that grand slam.

The ball came bounding at him again. He took a quick skip to set his balance and lashed it across court. Loomis dove for it, got it into the air for a short pop job. "It's a setup, Dunn. You never miss this kind." He was well behind it as it bounced. He gauged it carefully, swooped over it. He didn't need to follow the flight of that ball. "Outside," the linesman snapped. The umpire was making a little mark. "Game, Mr. Loomis," he said. "Mr. Loomis leads three games to love, first set."

Changing courts, he stepped under the umpire's stand and let his racket slip from his slimy fingers. His bad knee was throbbing now.

Burying his face in a towel, he said quietly: "Stay on your feet and take your beating, Dunn. You've known for months it was coming." There was no use kidding himself any longer. For months, long before he's seen that sweater at Seabright, the truth had been eating into him. He was a man on a boy's errand; he tossed his life into an ash can to follow a tin star. Seeing that sweater at Seabright was all that was needed to crack him. He knew he was out in the lot when he'd met her the night before. And when he's seen pity there in her eyes he'd slugged her and driven her off. He'd slugged her because he couldn't crawl back with the pack yapping at his heels with nothing to offer but his load of tin cups . . .

The crowd was roaring again. It was breaking over him like a heavy surf. He was swooping over the balls like a bird of prey, taking them rising and blasting them down the lines. He was beginning to feel it again; slowly that fine machine-like precision was coming back. He was getting his depth and the ball was digging into the baseline with a trenchant bite. He was playing each shot with everything he had, mixing up flat drives and spinners and chops.

He was barely aware of the stir in the stands. His eyes were locked on the ball. The applause came again like a hard, thrashing rain. He made a low, shoe-string recovery, angling it just out of Loomis' reach.

Across the nets he could see the flushed, bewildered face of Phil Loomis. Sweat stood in glistening beads on his face, sweat was pasting his shirt to his heaving chest.

Back and forth along the baseline Jock lashed them back, waiting for a short ball to carry him into the forecourt. Throwing his whole body against them as he came in to tuck them away. There was acid there between his shoulder blades, burning into him, and the sun smothered over him like a hot, steamy blanket. "You can do it, boy. Stay on your feet. It can't be much longer now."

WHEN it came after an eternity of time it was moments before it penetrated. Then he saw that the crowd had risen as a man. Phil, hand outstretched, was hurdling the net. The umpire was rapping out the words: "Mr. Dunn wins the third and final set . . ."

He was pressing Phil's moist hand, mumbling some inanity. He was shouldering his way through the pressing crowd. There was one awful instant as he stopped there at the edge of the stands, searching for that flash of color. Then he spied her hurrying out through the west gate.

"Annie," he yelled as he came plunging up behind her. "I've got it. I've got it for you!"

She stopped and turned slowly. Her face was bleak, her lower lip clenched tightly in her teeth. "I know, Jock—you won. And you'll go on to your grand slam next week. And after that—oh, you'll find something. Perhaps they have a championship on Mars that no earthly mortal has ever won."

"But look, Annie. You don't understand——"

"I guess I don't Jock, and that's a fact. And I was so sure when I read about Seabright and Newport that you had started to grow up and take inventory, that you were through with the crowd or the crowd through with you. When you blew up last night and told me about the sweater, I was so sure that I was right, that you were fed up with it all. But I wasn't taking any chances, Jock. I drove a hundred miles back to an old trunk to make sure there would be a chartreuse sweater in the stands to take your eye off that ball. But I got back just in time to see you come to life——"

"Then you weren't at Seabright?"

"No, of course not. Nor at Newport. This isn't the only chartreuse sweater in the world. I just came here to Southampton because I thought the dope was wearing off. I'd waited a long time for it to happen and I wanted to be with you when it did. Oh, it wasn't for me, Jock. I just wanted to tell you to break clean when your time came. I just couldn't stand by and see you hanging on like Bill and a lot of those others, like slap-happy prize fighters hanging around the gym, cadging a living. I wanted to tell you that three years isn't too long, that—oh, gosh, Jock, don't you see you're—you're still a 'white hope' to me?"

"Annie," Jock said, "that's all I wanted to know. There goes the grand slam. It's yours, Annie. And I'm throwing in the championship of Mars for good measure. That's what I've got for you, honey. You asked me for a measly Nationals championship once and I welshed on you. This grand slam is something no one else in the world ever game away."

"Jock! Jock, you mean you'll give that up? You're going to quit?"

"Quit! Annie, just look at that 'white hope' gleam in my eye. Say, Doctor Dunn's got three years to make up. And those goat-bearded medicos better begin looking to their laurels."

A Wonder Clock

It has ninety-three dials, and was built for King Leopold of the Belgians by his countryman Lodewyk Zimmer; it tells the time not only anywhere on earth, but on the sun, the moon, and any of the planets, as well as the times of the tides!

The fastest indicator flashes round the dial in a hundredth of a second; the slowest will take 26,000 years to go once round its dial.

A somewhat similar clock exhibited in Belgium not long ago by its maker, nineteen-year-old Edgard Heirman, an engineer, has 144 dials and weighs seven tons.—The Children's Newspaper.

Which animal took most and which took least into the Ark?—The elephant took his trunk, but the fox and rooster only carried a brush and comb between them.

Helen on a Racket Trail

A Helen and Warren Story

By Mable Herbert Urner

"DEAR, do you realize it's been almost a week?"

"What has?" Warren ripped off a magazine wrapper.

"You just don't care!" reproached Helen. "It doesn't mean a thing to you ——"

"What the devil you bleating about?" Then a dawning. "Well, what can I do?"

"You might at least be sympathetic! You haven't given her a thought. And I've hardly thought of anything else!"

Six days since Pussy Purr-Mew vanished. And still a mystery. Even if she'd slipped out to the hall—how could a conspicuous Persian escape the house unseen?

"If I could feel someone's caring for her! That she hasn't been run over——"

"You've said that before," turning a page. "Dinner ready? Twenty after six."

"No, a little late tonight. Dear, you're so callous! You don't miss her at all."

"Miss her hairs on my clothes! Now we've ads in two papers. Offering fifty bucks reward. What else can we do? Call in the G-men?"

"Nothing, I suppose. But if I only knew ——"

"Hello, this almost off," he pulled at a dangling sleeve button.

As she sewed the button, a stabbing reminder. That grey hair on the sleeve.

All week, her haunting remorse. Pussy Purr-Mew so sensitive. Purringly blissful at praise. But always so hurt when rebuked—or even laughed at.

"If I hadn't scolded her for knocking off that vase——"

"Now no need for remorse. Way you pampered that snobbish feline!"

Helen's wordless prayer. Let it be Pussy Purr-Mew—not another heartsick disappointment! Five other cats brought, just ordinary grey tabbies.

Now from the basket an indignant meow.

"Oh, cut the string!" feverish impatience. "Dear, your penknife——"

"Sounds like her yowl, all right!" Warren slitting the knotted cord.

MINIATURE TRAIN CARRIES PASSENGERS

A Miniature Locomotive and Cars, Built by John Armstrong, Mechanical Superintendent, British Columbia Government, Is Here Shown Giving a Party of Children a Tour Around Mr. Armstrong's Back Garden at 448 Quebec Street. The Model Was Built by Mr. Armstrong and Took Three Years to Complete. It Burns Coal for Fuel and Attains a Speed of Fifteen Miles an Hour.

Before they could rip it off, the paper pushed up. A grey streak across the floor!

"Yes, it is her!" Helen ecstatic.

"Pussy Purr-Mew! Oh, won't you let me catch you?"

"Your cat, ain't it?" the boy's impatient hint.

"Dear, don't, she's so frightened!" still reaching. "Wait, I have her!"

But Pussy Purr-Mew squirmingly unresponsive to the hugging endearments.

"Looks pretty fit. Certainly hasn't been on the streets a week. When'd you find her?" he turned to the boy. And where?"

"Just now. In that churchyard on the corner."

"The churchyard?" Helen stroking the silky fur. "Why, I look there every time I pass!"

"That's where she was!" belligerently. "Heard her eryin' in the bushes."

"So near home—and couldn't find her way! Always said that eat was dumb."

"But how could you catch her?" she puzzled. "So shy of strangers."

"A man helped me. I got this basket off a fruit stand. Then bought a paper to look up the Lost and Found."

"So you want the fifty?" grinned Warren, getting out his wallet. "Guess you've earned it. Now better put this in a savings bank."

"Yes, sir," avidly counting the five ten-dollar bills. "Thanks."

Helen showing him out to the hall. Then flying back to the library.

"Oh, it's so wonderful having her again! And I'm so grateful——"

"She's not! Selfish little beast. Next time you go gallivanting you can stay away," tweaking her tail. "No more fifty-dollar rewards."

"Dear, don't do that—she loathes it! I'll take her out and feed her."

"That boy—— Dear, did he seem familiar to you? I've seen him somewhere."

Folding the heavy brown paper, she crushed it into the cheap slat basket.

"Look!" excitedly. "Bits of glass—— That boy—now I know who he is!"

"You do, eh?" yawning over his magazine.

"That glazier on Third Avenue—his son!"

"Well, what of it?"

"He stole Pussy Purr-Mew," flamingly "To collect the reward!"

"Great guns, way you jump to conclusions! Why should being the glazier's son make him swipe your cat?"

"An old frame I'd a glass put in. He delivered it the day she disappeared!"

"Your suspicions!" he snorted. "That's no evidence."

Anna called in for confirmation. Yes, that was the day! And the boy left in the kitchen while she got the money! He might've hidden her under his coat.

"But if she were asleep—— Easy to pick her up then."

"Why should he want to? How'd he know we'd offer a reward?"

"Anyone would—a valuable Persian. And she didn't run away! She hasn't been on the street. Clean and well fed."

Yes, someone must've fed her," he conceded. "Hasn't the brains to forage."

"Dear, that boy's had her! Yet I'm sure his father's honest. If he knew the cat was stolen—he'd make him return that reward."

"Fat chance! Now forget it. Got your cat back. Isn't she worth the fifty?"

"As a reward I was glad for him to have it. But if he stole her—caused me all this worry——"

"Oh—oh! Now I know I was right!"

"More of your psychic proofs, eh?" disgustedly.

"This ad! I cut out the notice the first morning we ran it. And I remember this sandal on the back. If he just found her—he'd have bought today's paper!"

"Then look at today's. Same ad might have run all week."

"She's thrown out the morning papers. But dear, I'm positive. And I'm going to prove it! Can't we go over there—right now?"

"Right now we're having dinner! Late already, with all this excitement."

"But the place'll close soon," pleadingly. "And if we just question him about the dates—we can tell if he's guilty."

"Once you're set on a thing——" his yielding shrug. "But can't accuse him on any such evidence."

A low-ceilinged basement. Mirrors and panes of glass propped against the walls. A long table with cutters and rules. The floor crunchy with broken bits.

The stout, friendly glazier coming from the rear.

"Your son here?" brisked Warren.

"He'll be in any minute. Something I can do for you?"

"Why, we—didn't you have a Persian cat?" ventured Helen. "I—I wondered if you'd care to sell it?"

"Eddie just took it away to a pet store! A lady gave it to him last week. But this's no place for such a cat."

Plainly he suspected nothing! Not say anything—not distress him.

As they left the shop, the elevated thundering overhead.

"But we wouldn't want his father to know! I'm sure he's honest."

"Hello, here he comes now—— Not so fast, young man!"

"Found that cat in the churchyard, eh? Just this afternoon?"

"Yes, I did!" blustering defiance.

"Sure of that?" ominously. "Didn't take her when you delivered that frame? Your father just said you had her a week!"

"You didn't tell him?" his face white. "Should've! But we didn't."

"Aw, I meant to bring her back——"

"Yes, and collect! Know what that is?" grimly. "Kidnapping!"

"But only a cat! That ain't the same ——"

"How about taking money under false pretences? Know the penalty for that?"

"I'll give it back!" Panicky, he dug out the bills. "You won't turn me in, mister? I never done nothing before!"

"Well, next time you're out for easy money—think of your father," sternly. "For his sake we're letting you off."

"Yes, sir. I won't do nothing like that again. I swear!"

Now released, he scurried on down the basement steps.

"Threw a good scare in him," scowled Warren. "Won't snatch any more pets for ransom!"

"And dear, you were so sceptical," taking his arm. "But when I saw those slivers of glass—I just knew!"

"Yes, you broke this case, all right!" hurrying her on. "Now show some speed, Kitten. You've got Pussums—got back that fifty. Maybe at long last I'll get some dinner!"

Chain Gangs in B. C. Logging Woods

By CLARENCE L. VOSE

"CHAIN!"—The cry ringing through the forest comes from the throat of a compassman of a topographical survey party. The man ahead pulling the 200-foot steel tape halts, the compassman seizes the rear end, and they both pull until the thin ribbon of steel sings from the strain and there is no curve or sag in its length.

"Okay." They cease pulling and the chain—as the tape is called—goes slack.

"Slope!"—The compassman produces his Abney level, puts it to his eye and peers through it at a small mirror which his partner ahead flashes at the same height from the ground.

"Okay," he sings out as he puts away his instrument. He jots down some figures in his book, adjusts his staff compass to put the man ahead on the right course, and they are off. Through thick brush and wet marshes, over rocky bluffs and across rough canyons, they make their way, blazing a thin line as they go. At regular distances apart they cut pickets on which they mark certain figures and letters. These marks, to the uninitiate, would be as ununderstandable as Egyptian hieroglyphics, but to the topographer who follows along later it is perfectly clear. From this he is able to plot his contours on the map. Contours—for those who do not know—are lines of equal elevation. Thus they appear on the map as very crooked lines, for they naturally follow around the hillsides. The steeper the ground, the closer together are the contours.—

But why, one may ask, all this bother about contours, topography, etc.? What has it to do with logging?

Modern Logging

MODERN logging in British Columbia does not begin with the felling of trees as one would naturally think. A visitor to the logging woods is so impressed by the panting iron monsters that pull the huge logs out of the woods and by the hustle and hurry all about him, he is not aware that a tremendous amount of work is done before ever a tree is cut or a log hauled, nor of the importance of this work.

Nearly every large logging outfit has its survey crew to map the timber holdings and lay out the railroads. Making an accurate contour map for logging purposes is expensive and takes time, but it pays for itself many times over. With it the engineer can locate his railroads quicker, the "bull bucker" can lay out the donkey settings to better advantage, and the superintendent can plan his operations years in advance.

In the old days—and that was not so many years ago—logging was done without the aid of such maps, but at that time timber was not so far back as it is today nor the country so rough. Due to not being able to plan their settings more carefully, many fine logs, being just out of reach of their lines, were left in the woods to rot. It would have been unprofitable to move the machines for the few on the fringe. Today, with timber getting scarcer and more inaccessible, operations have to be planned ahead so the logs can be brought out as cheaply as possible, and none left in the woods. Hence the topographical survey.

The survey party usually camps in tents far in advance of logging operations. Large tracts may take two years or more to map, according to the size of crew employed and the roughness of the country.

Make Contour Map

THE first thing to be done in making a contour map is to run parallel base lines across the tract, half or three-quarters of a mile apart. These might be likened to parallel streets in a city. For greater accuracy a transit is ordinarily used for this work, although good results can be obtained with a compass where "local attraction" does not exist; that is, local disturbances that affect the magnetic compass needle, such as iron ore, etc. Levels are run along these base lines and the elevations marked on pickets at regular intervals.

Parallel strip lines are then run transversely to the base lines. These are quite close together, usually 440 feet. One might liken these to the intersecting city streets. Likewise levels are taken along these strip lines and marked at short intervals. This is done with an Abney level or clinometer, which is much faster than the regular surveyor's level.

The topographer follows up and down these strips with cross-section paper, on which he draws the contours, creeks, rivers, swamps and rock bluffs. He frequently makes trips off to the side to make sure of the direction the contours run, or that he is not missing any rock bluffs. He must know timber, for information about it must also be on the map. Different species, the approximate volume per acre—it all goes on the map so that the logging operator knows just what is ahead of him. After this the draftsman transfers it from the cross-section paper to the big map in the office.

Volume of Timber

BEFORE the elaborate contour map came into favor in the logging industry, most companies used a cruisers' map. These are contour maps made by the timber cruisers as they estimate the volume of timber. While they have their merits, they haven't nearly the degree of accuracy. For instance, distances are paced instead of being carefully measured with steel tape, and elevations are obtained by use of an aneroid which measures the air pressure and therefore changes with the weather. The cruisers' map has only fifty-foot contours—a difference of fifty feet in elevation between them—instead of the twenty-foot contours which are standard on logging maps.

Some logging companies still use cruisers' maps instead of going to the expense of employing a topographical survey party; but the majority, especially the larger outfits, find it good business to have a "chain gang" prepare a map that will save them many thousands of dollars.

a handle. While the candidate looks at a small mirror with one eye, the examiner moves a white spot along the hoop and is told when the spot disappears from sight. This is repeated with the other eye fixed on the mirror and thus is determined the width of vision. If the driver is one of those rare persons who can see to neither side of the direct line of vision—tunnel vision, it is called—then it may be necessary for him to mount special mirrors in his car for the safety of himself and others.

With the depthoscope, the examiner determines the depth of vision. The candidate fits his head to a long box-like instrument and looks at a truck and a railway crossing sign at the end. The sign is moved slowly and the driver calls out when they are parallel. If there is error in judgment, the extent is recorded and the driver is warned that he lacks depth of vision and thus may not be able to judge accurately the relative position of objects at a distance.

The color test comes next. Red, green and amber lights are flashed on one at a time and the driver names them, enabling the examiner to determine whether the driver is color-blind. As the position of the lights is changed frequently so there is little chance for a color-blind person memorizing the relative position of the colors. It happens, however, that such cases of extreme color-blindness are comparatively rare.

The final test is to determine the reaction time of a driver. Watching the lights, he clamps on the brake as fast as possible when the red light flashes. This is done four times and if the average is less than 75-100ths of a second the reaction time is considered satisfactory. Three-quarters of a second seems a short time to be allowed in which to move the foot from the accelerator to the brake pedal, but actually most persons complete the move from the flash of the red light in half to two-thirds of the time allowed.

In the course of the tests the examiner, in conversation, records whether the driver's hearing is good, fair, poor or whether he is deaf. Also he records the driver's physical condition as apparently normal, feeble, excitable, amputation.

The tests at the reactometer complete the examination and require only between ten and twenty minutes, depending on whether the driver wears glasses necessitating a double test of vision. If the candidate is passed by the examiner, he returns to the clerk's desk where he started. There his licence is stamped and returned to him. If restrictions are considered necessary the chief examiner checks over the examiner's report and discusses the situation with the driver. Every effort is made to assist the driver to remain on the road, and toward that end advice is given. It might be that the driver's vision is defective; in fact, other limitations are few. In such a case the driver is instructed to consult a competent authority, receive whatever attention is necessary in the opinion of the oculist, optician or optometrist, as the case might be, and return with a certificate that his faults in vision have been corrected and that he should be able to drive safely.

Thus the drivers' tests aim to make the highways safer. Examination is confined largely to physical fitness. Every effort is made to impress upon the drivers their responsibility as drivers and the necessity for observance of the rules of driving. The examination will not weed out the driver who is fully capable but reckless and thoughtless. He probably is the chief menace on the highways. He knows how to drive safely, but is so confident of his ability that he regards the rules as only for the less competent. How to curb him, other than by an educational campaign, without undue hardship on the safe driver, is a problem which is receiving the close attention of highway authorities everywhere.

Film of Human Heart

THE possibilities of diagnosing disease the better for having been to the cinema are demonstrated in Moscow, where a studio has completed a sound picture of the working of the human heart. The film is in two reels, the first reproducing the movement and tone of a healthy heart and showing the development of a characteristic form of heart trouble, the contraction of the aperture between the left auricle and the left ventricle. The progress of the disease is observed and the fluctuating heart throb heard. Irregularities in the rhythm of the heart beat form the subject of the second reel.

Foaming River and Peaceful Hill

By Robert Connell

JANUARY, the looking-two-ways month, has kept its face in kindly mood this year, and the other Saturday when I went out on the train to Langford it was at its kindliest. The slight frost fast disappearing before the sun made glitter as if a shower had just passed. The bracken of last year took on a deeper color, purplish brown here and dark russet there; the arbutus leaves glittered and the firs looked cheerfully bright; and as for the grass, who shall describe its color? It has been green ever since the first Fall rains revived it after the heat of Summer, but while the dead blades pale the verdancy of the new ones over much of its area, vivid are the close-pastured fields and the low hollows. But just as it is not all gold that glitters, so all that looks green is not grass. Myriads of seedling annuals and freshly leaved perennials add their respective hues to the general verdancy. What a varied scene we pass through in the half hour's run! Only familiarity can make us bury our noses in the newspaper as we pass salt water on our left and salt water on our right; then run through railway cuttings walled by dark rock gleaming with moss and fern and lichen, look down on little hillside farms, slip past dark woods where the smoke from a clearing turns the background to milky blue, and finally enter the natural parkland of Langford Plains with its scattered oaks and clustered spires of fir.

Atkins Road runs back from the station by the side of the railway. I decide to try my fortune along its course, chiefly to see the swollen waters of the Millstream. Being Saturday, the yards of the little homes are busy with children, happy-faced, their young voices making pleasant music in the clear air. Very soon I take to the open woods at the foot of spurs of rock and so exchange the mud of the road for a moist turf interspersed with pools of clear water and a single dyke carrying off the super-abundance. But I return to the road and by a hand-gate go down to the railway in order to see the outcrop of limestone in a cutting. The Millstream, whose sound we can hear coming up from below though its waters are invisible, cuts through a large lense of crystalline limestone here and the outcrop is on the western edge of it.

Regaining the road, I come to the river. When last I looked down on its waters they were but a gentle murmuring brook to be crossed anywhere at a stride and with flowering plants lifting their blossoms above its rippling surface. But today it is a noisy, plunging, foaming torrent, burying deep beneath its current the rocks from one to another of which we stepped that Summer day in the cool shade of the alders. From the bridge the Millstream is seen coming down its wooded valley and then suddenly narrowing as it falls between the perpendicular walls of a dark and narrow fissure. Below it expands again and from the other side of the bridge we see its waters surge over the broader valley and come tumbling over the rocks in a series of little cascades. Then it makes an auxiliary stream by a short cut across a corner of the valley while its main course follows the more deeply eroded and roundabout way.

Running Water

WHAT a fascination there is about water and especially running water! Up by the railway I had watched a ditch carrying off the water brought down from the woods. The ditch was straight and its banks were properly finished and kept in order, so that the water had nothing to do but follow the easy slope of the bottom, which was covered with bluish grey pebbles which, I suppose, came originally from the railway grade. Whatever the origin, the stream had laid them out so smoothly that it seemed like a pleasant garden path looked at through a gently vibrating glass. And now up here on the other side of the Millstream I am beside another ditch that runs through an old orchard, but nature has done much to soften if not to obliterate the marks of the shovel, and the banks are now softly irregular in outline, moulded roundly and mantled with the green of lowly plants. The old cutting still restrains it from meandering, but here and there it opens out into little bays and when, at the orchard's end the first of the wild trees greet it, forthwith it becomes more sportive in its course. It seems but fitting to find here, not far from the clear water so pellucid that every plant can be discerned and even the water snail in its movements along the bottom, the common daisy in flower. Its blossom is whiter than it will be later when the crimson tips the snowy straps of the outer florets, but its very purity of color makes it fit companion for the little stream. Wordsworth, in one of his less well-known poems, tells how he often sits on the daisy-dappled turf, "plays with similes" and gives "many a fond and idle name" to the little flower, such as these:

A nun demure of lowly port;
Or sprightly maiden of Love's court;

A queen in crown of rubies drest;
A starveling in a scanty vest;

A little cyclops with one eye
Staring to threaten and defy;

A silver shield with boss of gold;

I see thee glittering from afar,
And then thou art a pretty star;

Bright Flower! for by that name at last,
When all my reveries are past,
I call thee and to that cleave fast,
Sweet silent creature!
That breath'st with me in sun and air,
Do thou, as thou are wont, repair
My heart with gladness and a share
Of thy meek nature!

Slope of Mill Hill

I LEAVE the little rivulet as it runs under willows and cedars and a tall maple down the slope to the Millstream. Before me rises the slope of Mill Bay. There is no path or trail except the track of cattle across some exposure of the soil. Scattered firs make an open wood with some arbutus and occasional yew and oak. The ground is literally covered with plants. Long runners of dewberry make excellent traps for the unheeding, but the shorter ones of yerba buena have no designs upon your shins. Of course I stop to pluck the fragrant leaves and revive old memories in the enjoyment. How lovely are the Oregon grape leaves with their resemblance now of burnished bronze! These belong to the lowland species, the holly-leaved. Then everywhere and especially about the scattered boulders are the bright green leaves of sanicle already up two or three inches. The velvety seedlings of crane's-bill in places literally carpet the ground as does the chickweed in others. Buttercup and strawberry leaves, the latter's associations as aristrocratic as the former's are simple and lowly, stand cheek by jowl. Thousands of clover seedlings occur in places, and two species of Spring-beauties show each its characteristic leaves. And here is the trailing pink-flowered honeysuckle of the woods, its foliage as green as ever.

Now when the flowering plants are at rest the plants that never bear true flowers come into their own. These cryptogams as they have long been called are represented in our land scenery by ferns and horsetails mosses and liverworts, lichens and funguses, as well as by certain algae. The mere mention of the names to one who knows the groups suggests the colors of Autumn and Winter though many of them are Spring and Summer plants. As I climb up the hillside and my eyes are more or less on the ground I come across branchlets broken from the trees I pass. Most of these bear at least one species of lichen, but sometimes three of four. Here, for example, on a twig is one of our commonest species familiar on our oaks in many districts. Its pale, mealy green hair-like threads have won it the popular name of "old-man's-beard." With it is a foliaceous species which spreads along the surface of the twig with an almost fernlike division of its "frond" or thallus. It has the same mealy green color. Down below too the lichens are numerous and interesting and it is the bright scarlet of the cup-bearers that gives the most flowery touch to the Winter rocks. But there are also touches of silvery white and chestnut brown and even jetty black marking the fruit-bearing organs that give the lichens distinction although they lack the wide range of color and color combination found in the flowering plants. Some of the mosses already display their spore-bearing parts and these are often a bright chestnut red with yellow and are therefore in mass genuinely attractive. The chief liverwort at this season is a moss-like one whose color, a brownish green, and the peculiar structure of its branchlets, suggest to the observant something that differs from a common moss. Actually it is just a little lower than they. Patches of this moss-like liverwort are common among the mosses on tree trunks as well as on wet rocks. Here and there I see a fungus or toadstool, but usually of a quiet color, mousey brown or creamy white, but there is an absence of the red or violet kinds. The common licorice-fern is of course plentiful, but not so much so as it is in the shadier woods. The imbricated sword-fern appears as I get higher and the ground becomes still more open; it is the characteristic fern of dry exposed hillsides.

Ridges of Rock

NOW appear great ridges of rock that come down from the summit irregularly. They run northeast-southwest and are made up of roughly stratified volcanic rock, lava and ashes, with a dip to the southeast had with a good cleavage almost at right angles that looks like the true dip. In the clefts and along the low cliffs or walls of rock not only do the mosses, selaginellas and liverworts form great sheets, but the gold-back fern hides in the dark corners, rooted in the black mealy soil and in some of the wetter places the pretty ruddy saxifrage has its home. Its rosettes of shiny dark green leaves, regularly toothed around, are attractive although the white flower clusters that will brighten the rocks a little later are at present represented only by the central bud. The underside of the leaves is a purplish red. A closer inspection of the clefts shows a plentiful supply of collinsia and dwarf mimulus seedlings, as yet very small, but with promise of a fine show of blue and gold in a few weeks. But is is not only on the rocks that we find anticipation of Spring, nor is it confined elsewhere to the commoner and what might be called "weedier" flowering plants. Here I come on a little patch of lady's-slipper, not in flower of course, but recognizable by its dark green, oval, stalked leaves. Near by are several plants of what children call or used to call "finders," the mottled green and white leaved rattlesnake plantain, which is not a plantain, but one of our very common orchids, as inconspicuous in flower as the lady's-slipper is conspicuous, but unique in its snakeskin-patterned leaves. By this time I am almost at the top or just below the rocks of the summit and high above me rises the open watch-tower of the forestry service. For Mill Hill's 720 feet of elevation added to its singularly open and unimpeded view of the surrounding country makes it an admirable outlook station in the season of forest fires. It stands on a bare platform of rock where the chief vegetation is kinnikinnik in the shallow hollows. The view is as I have said very fine and the accompanying sketch taken from a pencil one made from the third platform of the tower shows the bird's-eye view of Esquimalt Harbor and the distant Victoria Harbor. The Parson's Bridge end of Esquimalt Harbor is out of sight and the Island in the left foreground is Inskip Island with Ashe Head behind and Whale Rock in front. In the far distance lies Whidbey Island at the entrance to Puget Sound, apparently two but actually one. The mountains, both Olympics and Cascades in that section of the horizon were quite concealed by low-lying clouds although to the east Mount Baker and the Cascades north and south were beautifully distinct.

Some years have passed since I last stood on Mill Hill. The first time I came up I did so very laboriously because I came up from the railway near what was then Parson's Bridge station and when I thought I had reached my goal I found I had still a valley to cross to reach the actual top. My last visit was made on a very stormy wet Winter day and I remember it was the only occasion on which I have encountered a mammal on the summit or near it. On the north side, just below the broad top, there lies a great boulder, a glacial erratic, of which I gave a sketch in an article some time ago. On this particular occasion as my companions and I dropped down to the ledge on which it lies we were astonished to see a rabbit bolt out from under the shelter of the rock and betake itself down the hillside.

Trees in Rocks

I MAY add that on the southwest corner and just below the top there is a very interesting example of the manner in which trees help on the process of rock erosion. A comparatively small Douglas fir has come up through a crevice in an outcrop of rock and has split it asunder in two or more directions. It is not a really uncommon phenomenon, but this is a particularly good example. Further down I came across a rather odd arbutus, growing on the steep block-strewn slope of the hill. At about six feet from the ground the trunk has turned sharply at right angles for about four feet and then again taken a right-angled course, this time downwards, then about three feet more of growth was followed by another growth at right angles first in a curve with the convex side down and then in a more or less straight horizontal course. From the upper edge of this meandering growth rise its four branches, the largest the second, next in size the first and the two further out smaller.

A little further down I came across another oddity. A Douglas fir and an oak have grown together side by side only a few inches apart. Each is about eighteen inches in diameter about ten feet from the ground. Here a branch from the oak came in contact with the fir and is now half imbedded in its bark which swelled out along the line of juncture. The enclosed branch is quite dead. It looks as if the young oak branch had originally made its way into the bark of the fir and before its death had grown sufficiently to cause the fissure.

I got down again in good time, walked back to Langfofrd and followed the Highland District road to its first bridge across the Millstream. It is always an interesting walk and a favorite of mine; even so short a stretch at this season is not without interest. The Sitka alders, for example, not commonly met with along our roads, display their catkins which will open later than those of the red alder and with the advent of the leaves instead of before them. The smooth grey stems of its bush-like growth distinguish it now. It never attains tree size like the red alder. Then the hazels are displaying their silvery green catkins and before long the bright crimson staminate flowers forming a little cluster of their own will make their appearance. The silvery little buds of the spiraea are also beginning to show. At the bridge the river is simply a full-running stream without cascades or falls. But on the way I passed a little tributary burn that made up in sound and general picturesqueness what it lacked in actual volume. At one place I came on what might be called a plant caseade; over the roadside bank tumbled a sheet of twin-flower or linnaea, its slender leafy branches trailing from top to the edge of the road like a delicate green veil. Imagine what it will look like next Summer when the pink flowers cover it and how sweet the scent in the air around!

Crack British Train Making Tour of the United States

"CORONATION Scot," streamlined, articulated flier of the London, Midland & Scottish Railway, which daily runs on a six and one-half-hour schedule between London and Glasgow, will arrive by the steamship Belpamela at Baltimore on February 13, to begin a 3,121-mile tour over eight American systems, visiting thirty-eight cities, and will later be exhibited at the New York World's Fair.

Driven by Frank C. Bishop, aided by Fireman J. McK. Carswell and Master Mechanic F. A. Soden, and piloted by an American engineer, the crack snub-nosed train, which holds the world's steam-traction record for distance for a non-stop run at a speed exceeding sixty miles an hour, will be exhibited at the following cities:

Baltimore, Washington, Wilmington, Philadelphia, Lancaster, Harrisburg, Pittsburgh, Wheeling, Columbus, Dayton, Cincinnati, Louisville, Indianapolis, Terre Haute, St. Louis, Springfield, Chicago, Kalamazoo, Battle Creek, Detroit, Toledo, Cleveland, Akron, Youngstown, Erie, Buffalo, Rochester, Syracuse, Utica, Schenectady, Albany, Springfield, Worcester, Boston, Providence, Hartford, New Haven and New York City.

In making the tour, the train will travel over the following railroad systems: Baltimore & Ohio, Pennsylvania, Big Four, Louisville & Nashville, Chicago & Alton, Michigan Central, New York Central, and the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad.

110 Years After

THE Belpamela left Southampton on January 23 for a twenty-day crossing of the Atlantic. It will mark the 110th anniversary of the historic crossing by the first British locomotive, "The Stourbridge Lion," which was imported in 1829 and ran over the line between Carbondale and Honesdale, Pa., built by the Delaware & Hudson Canal Company. This was the start of American railroading.

The operating crew, veteran British railwaymen, will arrive on the Aquitania on February 3, and will make their debut on the air from WNYC on Saturday, February 4, from 6 to 6:15 p.m.

Colonel K. R. N. Speir, who will be in charge of the "Coronation Scot" tour, will arrive by the Queen Mary on February 9, accompanied by R. A. Riddles, mechanical and electrical engineer.

Two Negro porters will be carried on the tour and the train, which runs only by day in Britain, will be completed by the addition of a sleeping car, designed to conform with the end-to-end decoration scheme of the train.

The tour will end in time for the train to be in position at the World's Fair on April 15, ready for the opening on April 30. A post-Exhibition tour is under consideration.

The "Coronation" locomotive, which will haul the "Coronation Scot" in America, is one of five identical engines, "Coronation," "Queen Elizabeth," "Queen Mary," "Princess Alice," and "Princess Alexandra." These and five other streamlined locomotives now nearing completion were designed after exhaustive wind-tunnel experiments conducted by L.M.S. engineers.

Seats 232 Passengers

PAINTED crimson-lake, waisted with four silver lines that converge to a V on the locomotive's snub nose, "Coronation Scot" seats 232 passengers: eighty-two first class and 150 third. Inside, the train impresses by the luxury of its appointments. Its timbers come from the forests of many countries. Some also come from the bottom of the River Thames: the Canadian silver elm, with which one of the three third-class vestibule cars in each set is overlaid, was cut from the piles recovered from the old Waterloo Bridge, the piles had lain under water from the time the bridge was built until its demolition in 1936. Nigeria contributed Kevazingo wood, grained with a fine waterfall effect, which is seen on the flush-paneled doors of the first-class vestibule car. Other Empire timbers used include Australian maple butt, Queensland maple, and Australian walnut. South America supplied Primavera sunray. From English woodlands came curly-grained olive ash, weathered sycamore, curly oak butt, and brown tiger-striped oak. The exterior coach fittings are of chromium plate, and, within, the first-class fittings are of satin matt chrome, and the third-class fittings of oxidized Venetian bronze.

Route of the Roman Eagles

THE British run of "Coronation Scot" follows the Roman Eagles all the way from London to Glasgow. It is hardly too much to say that most of the history of England and Scotland has been made along this route.

The English story is told from Euston to Carlisle. The traveler follows a line that once was the Danelaw, the old Viking border of the ninth century. Then, from a long stretch of rural scenery, he crosses the homeland of the great industrial revolution, which, a century ago, placed England suddenly in the forefront of the world as a trading nation. From there he is carried into the chief pleasure ground of all Britain, where, on hill and sea, in lake and woodland, there is hardly an acre that has not a special beauty of its own.

The Scottish story begins as, through dale and over fell, where scenery and history association vie in claiming his attention, the traveler is drawn into Carlisle, once the frontier of the great Roman empire, and more than once the frontier of the kingdom of England when her kings could boast of the lilies of France on their shields, but not the thistle of Scotland.

The sleek 4-6-2 locomotive "Coronation" marks the dramatic culmination of British steam-engine design, a striking advance in the direct line of evolution on the 4-6-2 unstreamlined "Princess Royal," previous masterwork of London, Midland & Scottish engineers.

"Coronation Scot" had a recent predecessor, "Royal Scot," which toured Canada and the United States in 1933 and was exhibited at the Chicago World's Fair. The famous train made tours before and after being exhibited, covered a total of 11,194 miles, and was visited by 3,021,601 persons. So popular was it that it started a namesake style in women's hats and had men's shirts, ties and shoes named after it. Cafes and teashops in various United States cities are named "Royal Scot" in honor of the train. A child's remark, overheard in Chicago, "Ain't she cute!" made headlines in England as America's verdict.

Says British Workers Given Attention

WHILE unemployed men in London are trying to deliver black coffins at Downing Street and chaining themselves to the railings in front of ministers' houses, Mr. Ernest Brown, Minister of Labor, roundly declares that there is no country in the world where, in addition to a great deal of private good nature, there is so much organized good nature as in Great Britain.

Speaking in Edinburgh, he said that those who stated that the public conscience had been complacent about the needs of the unemployed had no regard for the facts.

In the last four years, he continued, he had been responsible for administering an average of nearly $400,000,000 a year for benefits and allowances to the unemployed.

Wage rates for those in full-time employment fell by nearly 5 per cent on an average between 1929 and 1933, but they had been rising steadily since 1933. The cumulative increase from 1934 up to last December amounted to nearly $500,000,000 a year, he added.

The last figures—for November, 1938—showed that the real wages for work people in full employment were 11½ per cent over the average level of the years 1925 to 1929.

HADLEY, England—Dr. F. R. Pickard, thirty-six, dentist, gassed himself while experimenting with a newly-invented gas apparatus. Verdict of "accidental death" was returned.

Britain's Trade Shows Some Reductions

TRADE figures for the year 1938 show the extent to which Britain felt the draught from the recession in the United States. There was a very serious falling off during the first six months, but, happily, an improvement in the later months, except December, which checked the adverse trend.

Taking the year as a whole, and comparing it with 1937, imports were reduced by $537,000,000 to $4,600,000,000 and exports by $252,000,000 to $2,355,000,000.

One bright spot, however, is the substantial decline in the adverse "visible" balance which amounted to $1,940,000,000 compared with $2,156,000,000 for 1937. It is authoritatively stated that when account is taken of "invisible" trade items, such as income from overseas loans and shipping, Britain's balance of payments for the year will probably show only a small deficit, and this notwithstanding the heavy importations of material for rearmament purposes, much of which is chargeable to capital account.

Among the exports there were gratifying rises in shipments of machinery, ships, locomotives, aircraft and commercial vehicles. As usual, however, Lancashire suffered heavily, cotton exports falling off by more than $90,000,000.—J.E.N.

A New Book on Skiing

A NEW book which is attracting a great deal of attention among skiers is "The Hannes Schneider Ski Technique," by Benno Rybizka, New York, in which the methods followed at the Hannes Schneider Ski School of St. Anton am Arlberg, in the Austrian Tyrol, are put into permanent form.

Warning that no one can learn to ski by reading books alone, Schneider gives his official blessing to the book in a brief foreword, and says: "Only by energetic and diligent practice can one succeed on skis. Nevertheless, it is essential to understand, at least in theory, the basic movement of skiing. This book serves that purpose and leads the reader to the right path."

The author, who was assistant to Hannes Schneider and who is director of one of the two official Hannes Schneider schools in the United States, has carried out his reputation as a teacher by the skillful way in which he handles his material in the book. With thoroughness he misses no important detail in analyzing various movements which go to make up a skilled skier, but neither does he pile detail after detail into his description until his point is lost under a maze of technicalities.

Benefit of Novice

FOR the benefit of the novice, Rybizka starts with some sane words of advice about equipment, leading easily from there to the preliminary steps of walking and climbing. Then follows a detailed description of the three fundamental exercises which form the base of the technique for which Schneider became famous as the first man to study, formulate and teach in a simple and progressive method the fundamentals of Alpine skiing. While Schneider supporters do not claim that he is the inventor of modern skiing, they name him as the founder of modern downhill technique.

When the beginner has mastered these three exercises—and it is on his complete mastery of them that the whole logical progression of the method depends—he may proceed to the speed-turns. In this section of the book advanced skiers will be especially interested in what Rybizka has to say about those two much-debated subjects, the Arlberg crouch and the Absitemen. The book concludes with a chapter on the spectacular jump turns and terrain jumps, moves which call for the skill of an expert.

The book is beautifully illustrated, most of the pictures having been taken by Miss Christine L. Reid, of Brooklin, Mass., with Rybizka as model, at Sunshine Ski Lodge near Banff in the Canadian Rockies.

The Hannes Schneider School in the Austrian Tyrol no longer exists, but the technique he formulated will live forever in the book written by his former assistant, making the path clearer for skiers and attracting new enthusiasts to the sport.

"The Mikado" on the Screen

By J. Edward Norcross

Film Critics Puzzled—Labor as a Brake—Union Propagandists—Safer Cycling—Protection in War—Saving British Shipping—Tea Auction

LONDON (By Mail).—The film critics can't quite make up their minds about "The Mikado," the first of the Gilbert and Sullivan operettas to appear on the screen.

They agree that it has never been so well sung, that the music has never been so well played, that every word, sung or spoken, is articulated clearly, that "technicolor has never turned out anything better than this fantastic canvas of fairy tale colors," and that the expenditure on the production has been sufficiently generous.

But they are by no means sure that the public will really like it. The right critic might be able to prophesy with some confidence, but the right critic is probably, as yet, unborn. He should be a critic who has never seen a stage performance of a Gilbert and Sullivan operetta and who, therefore, will judge it solely from the standpoint of entertainment value as a film.

Today's film critics cannot do that. They are all Savoyards. Comparison of the film with the stage production they have hitherto known and loved is inevitable and the film comes off second best.

In general, they think the producer, Mr. Geoffrey Toye, has fallen between two stools. He might have set out to please the people who rejoice in the Savoy performances or the tremendously more numerous cinema habitues who don't care a bit about Savoy traditions and want only a good picture.

Mr. Toye compromised. Enough dialogue and music was cut out to fit a running time of one hour and twenty minutes. Nevertheless some of the precious minutes are given over to an original prologue and occasional liberties are taken with an almost sacred canon. One critic confesses that he nearly walked out when the first verse of Yum Yum's number, "The Sun and I," was annexed by Nanki-Poo.

But, in any event, could Gilbert's humor be "got through the celluloid?" And even if it could, would it be enough? The fact is that the sympathetic receptivity of the audience counts greatly in the stage show and much that makes a personal appeal when it comes from living actors and actresses falls flat from the screen. There can be no encores, for instance, and lovers of Gilbert and Sullivan will realize how far this goes to destroy the complementary contribution of the audience to the success with which one of the operettas can be put over.

As one critic puts it: "Whether a world as essentially artificial as Gilbert's can ever survive translation to the screen is arguable. His characters are, of course, puppets; you watch them as you watch Punch and Judy, conscious that behind the creatures walking and talking so realistically, there is somebody, clever fellow, pulling the strings. On the stage this does not matter much . . . The camera brings us sharply down to earth . . . But it is a great tester and debunker . . . On seeing the characters at our elbow in broad daylight we simply don't believe in them."

Among the performers Kenny Baker, who came from Hollywood to play Nanki-Poo, wins much commendation despite his American accent. The others are almost all from the D'Oyly Carte companies and are steeped in the Savoy tradition. Constance Willis, however, was brought from Covent Garden and grand opera to play Katisha, and Jean Colin, for Yum Yum, from British films and musical comedy.

The Savoy Hotel was built out of the profits of the operetta; the critics doubt very much whether the profits of the film will be large enough to build another.

Labor in Politics

WRITING in The News-Chronicle, the Opposition Liberal organ, Mr. J. B. Priestley, of "The Good Companions," confesses himself a Left-Winger in politics and lays his finger on the underlying weakness which militates against Labor becoming a truly national political party.

Two or three years ago, he says, he addressed a Summer school organized by an extreme left wing section of Labor and observed in his talk that more effort should be made to convert the middle classes, pointing out that the highly-trained technicians, so necessary now in industry, were all members of these classes.

He continues: "The leader of the party replied, with the enthusiastic approval of our audience, that they cared nothing for the middle classes, that one class-conscious navvy was worth all the humbugging middle classes put together, and so forth.

"Everybody cheered, but I felt rather melancholy, for I could not see how a country could be run on nonsensical rhetoric of this kind."

Mr. Priestley does not think trades unionism makes a good basis for a national political party. "A trade union background and training produce a certain type of mind, admirable within its limits, but not a deeply creative, really statesmanlike mind," he writes.

"The thorough-going trade unionist, it seems to me, naturally assumes that somebody else will start something, and then afterwards he will pop in and see that the wages and hours are all right.

"He assumes, in short, that the initiative will be elsewhere. He is a brake, not an engine."

Mr. Priestley here goes to the bottom of the differences that are constantly arising between the trades union leaders of the Labor Party and the Socialist leader, Sir Stafford Cripps.

Sir Stafford is a member of the National Executive Council of the Labor Party elected on that body largely in the hope that he would conform to party decisions. Sir Stafford, however, persists in his campaign for a "Popular Front," a union of all Opposition parties, despite the repeated decisions of the Labor Party to plough a lonely furrow.

The Labor Party is now engaged on a nation-wide campaign "to arouse the country to the dangers of the foreign policy of the National Government and to win support for a great programme of domestic reform and reconstruction." Leaflets, films and political meetings are being used on a big scale.

Sir Charles has chosen this moment to issue a dramatic personal manifesto which has been distributed throughout the local organizations of the party in which he again urges the formation of a combined Parliamentary Opposition, taking in all Opposition parties from Communists to Liberals.

He did this immediately after a meeting of the National Executive at which the proposal had been defeated by seventeen votes to three, his supporters being Mr. D. N. Pritt, K.C., M.P., another Socialist of upper-class origin, and fiery Miss Ellen Wilkinson, M.P. All three had forthwith been asked did they deem it right and proper, that in the circumstances, they should resign from the executive and had all answered "no."

And then Sir Stafford went straight out of the meeting to issue his "Labor Front" manifesto.

How the Labor executive will meet this act of defiance remains to be seen. For the moment it has been content to publish an official statement in which Sir Stafford is severely censured for an effort "to plunge the movement into another useless and disturbing controversy which can only have the effect of bringing the party into a state of harmful confusion."

Nevertheless, so far as one can be sure of anything in politics, it is certain that Labor cannot win the next general election unaided. Which is why the hostility of Transport House (Labor headquarters) to the "Popular Front" exasperates Sir Stafford.

Spread Propaganda

THE Trades Union Congress has evolved an ingenious scheme for getting its propaganda into Germany. Records are taken of translations of speeches by trades union leaders in this country which are smuggled into that country and broadcast from secret mobile transmitters.

The general secretary of the National Union of Railwaymen, Mr. John Marchbank, and Mr. J. Henderson, M.P., a former president, have already sent one message, addressed mainly to German railwaymen, supporting the cause of democracy, peace and freedom.

To these and other personal messages are to be added summaries of news banned by the German Ministry of Propaganda.

The van carrying the mobile transmitters is moved from place to place each day and the German political police have been searching for it, so far without success, it is stated.

Contact is maintained between the German Freedom Party, a secret organization and the British trades union leaders by means of an underground service which brings to the latter information otherwise unobtainable as to what is going on behind the scenes in Germany.

The Trades Union Congress, by the way, has not obtained complete Labor support for its decision to approve of the Government's Air Raids Precautions proposals. The National Union of Railwaymen standing out on the ground that approval might be taken as approval of or non-opposition to the Government's foreign ploicy.

The T.U.C., however, is acting on the assumption that its constituents generally will press on with such action as may fittingly be taken to make the scheme workable.

What Is the Year?

MR. Hilaire Belloc, in the delightful column he writes for The Sunday Times, reminds us that this year, 1939, possibly might more properly be numbered anything else from 1932 to 1943.

We owe the fact that we make it 1939 it appears, to a learned abbot named Dionysius, who lived in Rome 1,400 years ago, and who worked out the date of Our Lord's birth as occurring just after the middle of the eighth century as reckoned from the founding of Rome. Dionysius called that year the Year One because, as he wrote: "We did not wish to mix up our memorials with an impious persecutor (Diocletian), but rather did we choose to note the sequence of years from the Incarnation of Our Lord Jesus Christ."

He was almost certainly wrong, says Mr. Belloc, how wrong nobody knows, but his Year One may have been anything from two to seven years out. But that does not matter.

"It took root and you will not shift it now, neither you nor millions with you," declares Mr. Belloc, "not all the revolutionaries, not all the over-learned. I suppose it is about as firm a thing as the past has left us, is the computation of the years A.D. and B.C. . . ."

"No one ever made it official and no one can properly tell you how it developed roots so firm and so penetrating. But I say it again, it is established now more decidedly than any other act of all our long story."

And Mr. Belloc passes on to castigate all pedants, more particularly those who write "Magna Carta" instead of "Magna Charta"; "Thomas Becket" instead of "Thomas a Becket"; "King Aelfred" instead of "King Alfred," and, most abominable of all, "the Battle of Senlac" instead of "the Battle of Hastings."

They may get away with these monstrosities in time, but "they will never shift A.D. and B.C. They will never turn this year of Grace into 1943 or 1932," snorts the famous historian.

AWAY ON A LONG TRAINING CRUISE

H.M.C.S. Ottawa leaving her berth at Esquimalt naval jetty for a long training cruise. The Ottawa, unit of the Royal Canadian Navy destroyer fleet, is in charge of Captain G. C. Jones, R.C.N., and at present heads the West Coast Division on its jaunt to the Atlantic, where it will be engaged with East Coast ships and the America and West Indies Squadron of the Royal Navy.

Code for Cyclists

SCORES of thousands of children in this country ride bicycles to and from school despite road traffic dangers. As the authorities have to provide accommodation for the machines during school hours they are in a position to exercise some authority in respect to their use.

Blackpool, the famous Lancashire seaside resort, is taking advantage of this to inaugurate a "safety-first" scheme which may be generally adopted throughout Great Britain.

To begin with it is laid down that no pupil can bring his bicycle to school without a permit issued by the head teacher. This permit is, in effect, a licence held subject to conformity with certain conditions.

To observe the Highway Code;

To obey all the cycle rules of school;

To maintain my cycle in a safe condition

Never to interfere with another pupil's machine;

Never to carry another person on my machine;

Always to ride with both hands on the handlebars;

Always to obey traffic light signals, "halt" and "slow" signs;

Always to obey all the rules of the road,

Always to follow the safest route to and from school, and

To be courteous to other road users.

A blank page is provided for endorsements by head teachers for failure to observe any of the rules. Head teachers may suspend or withdraw the licence at any time.

The decision to put the plan into effect was in part the consequence of a general inspection of cycles by police visiting the schools. Several hundred machines were condemned outright as being dangerous to ride. Parents are now required to sign an undertaking to insure that the machines shall always be safe.

Manchester is likely to put the scheme into operation at least so far as inspection of children's bicycles is concerned.

It may be added that Lancashire has already an enviable reputation for success in reducing the number of accidents on its roads. Last year the "courtesy cop" system was tried out on a large scale in that county with the result that the casualty rate on roads notorious for their "butcher's bills" was cut down more than 25 per cent, while that of the rest of the country showed no diminution.

War and Protection

SIR John Anderson, Lord Privy Seal and Minister-in-Charge of Civilian Defence, says that the Air Raids Precautions Department is working on the assumption that there is risk of war within a comparatively short time—which is very comforting to people who are quite aware that they are just as likely to be bombed as anybody else.

Sir John has just returned from his Christmas holiday, his going away for which had given rise to some carping criticism in the press to the effect that he should have no time for holidays in this hour of crisis.

Sir John has met this by saying that after the strenuous efforts of the last three months and in view of the work ahead for months to come a respite was necessary. It was, in fact, a wise economy of time and he had not only taken a holiday himself, but had insisted on his subordinates doing likewise.

It was also rumored that the holiday was but the prelude to Sir John's impending resignation on the ground that the Treasury was obstructing him in his work.

He has promptly denied the insinuation. "The Chancellor and his department have given me every possible assistance," he says. "There need be no misgiving in the public mind as to the co-ordination of the various departments concerned in civil defence. They are working together admirably."

The agitation for deep public shelters, as against the light steel household shelters which are to be provided at a cost of $100,000,000, continues. A number of leading members of the medical and surgical staffs of the great hospitals have signed a letter to the press urging the former.

"Air raids would produce enormous numbers of casualties," they say." If the morale of even highly-trained troops cannot be maintained against continuous bombardment without adequate protection, how can it be expected that women, children and the aged will endure similar trials . . . It is our considered opinion that fully efficient medical and surgical treatment of air raid casualties is impossible unless and until there are also provided adequate bomb-proof shelters for those who cannot be evacuated promptly from danger areas."

The Government, however, has finally decided against deep shelters. As Sir John Anderson's remark on the necessity for haste shows, time is the essence of the contract. Were the Government sure of a year more of peace it would be different. As it is, a short-term policy is imperative and deep shelters are not consistent with a short-term policy.

For the present every effort is being made to produce the light steel shelters announced by Sir John a few weeks ago. The first order for steel, 120,000 tons, sufficient for 400,000 shelters, has been given.

Subsidy for Shipping

IF British shipping is to be saved from gradual extinction the Government will have to provide annual subsidies for all classes, aggregating between $40,000,000 and $50,000,000 a year. There is good reason to believe that this will be done, at least in large part.

The Royal Navy is in first-class condition and all necessary provision is being made for its maintenance on such a scale that, were it not for the air menace, the people of this country, in the words of the late Lord Fisher, could sleep sound o'nights.

But, as The Daily Telegraph remarks: "It has been an axiom of British policy for centuries that a strong merchant navy is the foundation of national defence and indispensable to national prosperity."

The mercantile marine, however, has been declining for years. Both the shipping and shipbuilding industries have been fighting against too great odds. Under fair conditions they could hold their own and beat the other fellow at the game. But the subsidizing of foreign ships, together with political devices which have robbed British ships of their rightful share of the world's carrying trade, have brought about a condition described as almost desperate.

The Empire, in fact, is threatened with a shortage of tonnage in the near future which would be disastrous in the event of war. This is brought out clearly in the report, just issued, of the committee appointed some months ago, under the chairmanship of Lord Essendon, to frame proposals to arrest the decline. It was intimated at that time that financial assistance would be given where necessary.

The committee finds that subsidized foreign competition affects all classes of British shipping, whether liner, tramp or tanker. As a result the United Kingdom's share of world shipping has become progressively less and the United Kingdom mercantile marine has declined both in tonnage and in number of ships, with consequent loss of available man-power. There are 2,000 fewer ships than in 1914, and 50,000 fewer seamen.

It will be recalled that several years ago a subsidy was given in respect of tramp steamers. This was dropped when things improved a year or two ago. But the improvement was short-lived and a renewal to the amount of $7,500,000 a year for five years is now proposed. Similarly subsidies amounting to $25,000,000 for liners are suggested, and so on through the several classes.

In addition special measures are urged against any action by certain nations to the prejudice of British shipping, and it is advised that when trade treaties are being negotiated advantage should be taken of the opportunity to improve by way of commercial arrangement the scope of the cargo carriers of the United Kingdom.

This latter has a direct bearing on such cases as the Russian lumber trade, all but 7 per cent of Russian exports of lumber to Great Britain being carried in other than British vessels by the fiat of the Government of the U.S.S.R.

So far the committee has dealt with the shipping situation. It feels that British shipping must first be restored to prosperity since otherwise nothing can avail British shipbuilding. Immediate consideration, however, is to be given to the latter problem.

"To other nations which foster their shipping and shipbuilding at enormous cost to the state," concludes The Daily Telegraph, "such industries are a matter of prestige.

"To our island country and our sea-sundered British Commonwealth a great merchant fleet is a condition of survival."

London's Tea Party

THE other day three elephants, laden with chests of tea, made their way from St. Katharine's Dock to the City of London. They should have gone on to Mincing Lane, but as they would have disrupted traffic in the city the tea was transferred on Tower Hill to horse-drawn trucks to be conveyed to the rooms of the Tea Brokers' Association, where a notable company, headed by the Lord Mayor in full state and the Lord Privy Seal, Sir John Anderson, a former Governor of Bengal, awaited it.

There two pounds of the tea, in a silver casket, was sold by auction, the Lord Mayor acting as auctioneer. The bidding was cumulative, each bidder paying the amount by which he had increased the previous bid. The casket was finally knocked down for $5,780. The auction continued, chromium caskets similar to the silver casket and to a gold casket which goes to the King and Queen, being offered. In all, thirty-six pounds of tea was thus disposed of and the charities associated with the tea trade benefited to the amount of $11,140. The silver casket is to be kept until 2039.

As the use of elephants indicated, the tea was Indian tea. These observances, in fact, marked the centenary of the first sale of Indian tea in the city tea saleshouse, the date being January 10, 1839. The London Times, by the way, expresses regret that Sir John Anderson did not do the thing in style by riding on an elephant from Whitehall, a mode of travel with which he is not unfamiliar.

At all events, the centenary was well worthy of celebration for it noted the birth of a great industry. Until 1839 all the tea consumed in Great Britain and the British Empire had come from China. It was known, however, that a certain variety of the tea plant grew wild in Assam. It was regarded as worthless, but it was thought the soil and climate would be favorable for the cultivation of the Chinese plant.

Chinese plants proved a failure and it was ultimately found that, after all, the Indian plants produced a tea with a flavor different from that of China tea, but nevertheless delicate and palatable. Then began in earnest the effort to grow Indian tea for the market.

It was a heroic undertaking. Nearly the whole of Assam was then covered with almost impenetrable jungle, the haunt of tigers and leopards. Elephants, rhinoceroses, wild buffaloes and poisonous snakes were found in multitudes, and insects made life intolerable for white men.

Today the jungle has given place to the tea plantation at the cost of the lives of nearly three-quarters of the pioneers, British capital to the amount of $500,000,000 has been invested in the industry, and employment is given by it, directly and indirectly, to 2,000,000 British subjects.

Veteran of Football

ASSOCIATION football has lost its grand old man in the person of Charles E. Sutcliffe, president of the Football League, who has passed away at the age of seventy-three.

Mr. Sutliffe, says the well-known sports writer, A. W. Ledbrooke, was the man who made modern first-class football into the grand spectacular entertainment we know today.

"The game has lost its finest legislator and a real character," he continues; "the public has lost a man who helped others to keep the game clean from corruption . . .

"The football enthusiast of today knows Mr. Sutcliffe for two things: he was the man who made up the fixture list, and he was the man who tried to stop pools betting by altering the fixtures at the last minute.

"The fixtures will go on being prepared according to his 'secret' formula . . ."

Mr. Sutcliffe, year after year, had just a week in which to draw up a list of nearly 3,000 fixtures for the next season, a tremendous task which he accomplished by retreating to a quiet spot where he could work quite undisturbed. His son has the formula now and will carry on in the old gentleman's place.

In his time, Mr. Sutcliffe was famous as a referee. He had one extraordinary record. In a first-class match between Liverpool and Blackburn he disallowed seven goals before one was allowed to count.

"The professional game, as represented by the Football League," concludes Mr. Ledbrooke, "is largely his making, and the crowds which on an average Saturday aggregate 700,000 know that football is 'run straight' because of his endeavors."

Sees Nothing Wrong

THE outspoken Bishop of Liverpool, Dr. A. A. David, who recently caused some commotion in ecclesiastical circles by declaring that he saw nothing wrong in poor people putting an occasional shilling into a football pool, now lectures football crowds on the ground of unsportsmanlike behavior—that is if, as may be assumed, he endorses, even if he did not write, an article appearing in The Liverpool Diocesan Review, of which he is the editor.

"Of course," says The Review, "the home side are expected to win, and failure to do so is naturally a great disappointment to the majority of the crowd, but we do not think the referee should be made the scapegoat for the failure of the home team; and surely nothing can justify the booing with which a decision against the home side is so often received.

"Perhaps worst of all is the sustained jeering we have heard when one of the visiting players is preparing to take a penalty or convert a try."

The latter practice, it may be remarked here, has only recently crept in at football matches in this country. Those who indulge in it seem to have taken a leaf out of the book of trans-Atlantic baseball fans, but attempts by the spectators to "rattle" a player are really part of the game over there.

"The bad old spirit of win, tie or wrangle is not dead," The Review continues. ". . . The frequency with which soccer players openly question the referee's decisions is a cause of wonder to those who have been taught to accept the umpire's or referee's decisions without a murmur, even if they believe it to be wrong."

Frowns on Broadcasts About the Stars

DR. H. Spencer Jones, the Astronomer Royal, has protested to the British Broadcasting Corporation against its proposed broadcast of talks on astrology.

The talks are to form a series of "Birthday Parties," held monthly, at which a well-known astrologer will tell film and stage celebrities whose birthdays fall within the month, and, incidentally, other people, what the stars have in store for them. Miss Bebe Daniels, the American film actress, is to open the first.

"I think it is a very foolish thing to do," said Dr. Jones in the course of an interview. "Astrology is not a science; it is pure empiricism. It is extraordinary how many people are gulled by the so-called horoscopes, and anything the B.B.C. might do to make people think there is something in it is to be deplored."

Mr. Will Hay, the comedian, who is also a well-known astronomer and discovered a new marking on Saturn some years ago, said:

"I cannot see how the stars, either by their positions in the sky or in any other way, can affect happenings on a body the size of the earth which is so remote from them in space."

May Abolish the Kilt When War Comes

SCOTLAND is much exercised over a report that the War Office is considering the abolition of the kilt in war time.

It is said that the kilt is unsuitable for modern war conditions. It does not fit in well with mechanization and mechanization is now complete throughout the army with the exception of the Life Guards and the Scots Greys. It is also held that trousers are much more comfortable in trench warfare.

On the other hand it is urged that the kilt has had the effect of demoralizing the enemy, to whom the spectacle of the "ladies from hell" was affrighting. Hitler, in "Mein Kampf," charges the German propagandists with making a grave error in trying to ridicule the Highlanders as "dolls with women's clothing." He adds that the German troops were disillusioned when they came up against the "dolls" and their bayonets.

By FRED BENNETT

A FRIEND of mine remarked: "There are two ways of doing most things; how about planting fruit trees?"

There certainly are two ways to plant young fruit trees and it is astonishing how often the wrong way is recommended and used.

First, there is a very popular idea that a tree several years old that can be bought cheaply is a bargain. The older the tree when it is removed from the nursery row, the greater the percentage of roots have to be sacrificed in the digging and the longer, even with expert care, it is recovering from the shock.

In planting, dig the hole wide rather than deep, and drive a suitable stake firmly into the bottom; then plant the tree to the stake. Do not plant the tree first and drive the stake in later.

The depth to bury the roots underground is indicated by the lighter section of the bark near the roots. This is the depth underground in the nursery. Fill the hole not more than level with the edges with soil from your kitchen garden. Do not firm it in any way, nature will do this far better than you can.

Use no manure or artificial fertilizers in the planting; strong foods and stimulants will benefit your tree only when it is growing vigorously. These applied to dormant and freshly removed trees are poisonous.

If your tree is a one-year-old shoot, cut the top off about four feet from the ground. Branches lower than this hinder garden work. The tree is hardly likely to want pruning for two or three years. Before you tackle this job, attend one of the Victoria Horticultural Society's pruning demonstrations.

Avoid Setbacks When Pigs Are Weaned

IT is a common fallacy among pig keepers that during the period of change-over from mother's milk to ordinary food, young pigs must of necessity suffer a setback.

Such a state of affairs may not occur, however, if care and common sense are exercised during this admittedly difficult period.

In the first place the mother must have been in a position to supply good milk to her youngsters. If a satisfactory supply of milk is kept up, the piglings are strong enough by weaning age to cope with the difficulties ahead.

However, if they are weakly at weaning age, they cannot be expected to thrive directly they are placed on a different diet.

The young pigs must be given supplementary foods as early as they will take them, at from three or four weeks if possible. They should be encouraged to nibble at their mother's rations. This should not be difficult, as they will follow her example at the trough.

But herein lies the secret of steady growth—these rations should be so constructed that they will be acceptable and beneficial to the young pigs as well as to the sow.

Some pig keepers blame breeding for slow growth, particularly after weaning, but actually there is little difference in the growth rate of mongrel and pedigree stock when they receive the same rations.

Lime-Loving Plants

Work into the soil around each specimen a two-ounce dose of freshly-slaked lime and next year's flowering will be much finer.

Amongst shrubs and trees the subjects most in need of lime are brooms, cistuses, flowering cherries and almonds.

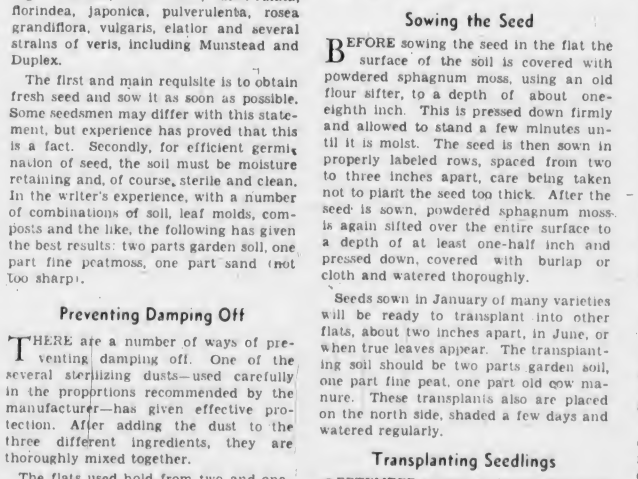

The greatest possible service you can render is to hoe in around each specimen, as far as the branches stretch, slaked lime at the rate of three ounces to the square yard.

Spring Garden Festival To Be Held in May

SPONSORED by the Victoria Horticultural Society, the Victoria Rock Garden Club and the management of the Empress Hotel, Victoria's famous Spring Garden Festival, which yearly draws many hundreds of flower and beauty lovers to the Island Capital of British Columbia, has now been definitely fixed to take place each year from the first Wednesday to the following Saturday in May. This year from May 3 to 6, inclusive.

Despite seasonal fluctuations due to weather, Victoria at this time of the year is usually particularly beautiful and fully justifies its much-publicized phrase, "a bit of old England." Lilacs, laburnums, hawthorns (pink and white), lilies of the valley are in bloom. The rock gardens for which the city is particularly famed are glowing tapestries of color. Primroses as yellow as those in Devon's lanes open on mossy banks. Wild hyacinths and yellow blom riot over the headlands. Dogwoods star the lanes.

Highlights of the festival include approximately fifty gardens to be opened to the public; a two-day Spring flower show; a one-day decorated tables display; a get-together dinner when eminent visiting horticulturists may meet their Victoria confreres and garden owners, and lectures.

SHORTHORN IS THE GIANT OF THE SHOW

Imagine the surprised look on the faces of the two girls above when they encountered the Shorthorn from Foulness Isle, Essex, which was acclaimed as giant of the show. They are seen above trying to guess its weight for the weight-guessing competition. The Shorthorn is six feet high, twelve feet six inches long, eleven feet around the girth, and is thought to be the largest Shorthorn in the world. It was exhibited at the Smithfield Fat Stock Show at the Royal Agricultural Show, London.

Primulas of Polyanthus Type Easily Raised From Seed

By GEORGE B. DOBBIN

Secretary of the Men's Garden Clubs of America, in The New York Times

MANY gardeners look at the colored illustrations of primulas in the catalogues, especially those from England, and wish that they might possess them in quality. Then they pass them up with the remark "they are too hard to raise."

Some of the primulas are "difficult"; but the writer has found many very easy to raise from seed. By following a simple cultural routine, he has enjoyed them by the hundreds, especially those of the Polyanthus type. Some of the others are a little harder to handle, but the chief difference appears to be in the length of time in germination of the seed. Among the many types successfully grown from seed in the writer's garden are the following: auricula, cortusoides, denticulata, florindea, japonica, pulverulenta, rosea grandiflora, vulgaris, elatior and several strains of veris, including Munstead and Duplex.

The first and main requisite is to obtain fresh seed and sow it as soon as possible. Some seedsmen may differ with this statement, but experience has proved that this is a fact. Secondly, for efficient germination of seed, the soil must be moisture retaining and, of course, sterile and clean. In the writer's experience, with a number of combinations of soil, leaf molds, composts and the like, the following has given the best results: two parts garden soil, one part fine peatmoss, one part sand (not too sharp).

Preventing Damping Off

THERE are a number of ways of preventing damping off. One of the several sterilizing dusts—used carefully in the proportions recommended by the manufacturer—has given effective protection. After adding the dust to the three different ingredients, they are thoroughly mixed together.

The flats used hold from two and one-half to three inches of soil. Drainage is provided by sphagnum moss, well soaked in water.

The flats are sterilized with boiling water or steam. Then about one inch of sphagnum moss is placed in the bottom of each and on this is sifted enough soil (using a quarter-inch screen) to fill the flat to about one-half inch from the top. This is pressed down even and the balance of the flat filled with soil, using a finer screen (wire fly screening does well), and leveled off. If one of the dust sterilizing materials is employed, the entire flat is thoroughly wet and allowed to stand for the number of hours called for in the instructions. This allows the sterilizing material to become effective and the peat to absorb much of the moisture. This will settle the soil slightly.

The writer never plants seeds of any kind without first dusting them with a mercurial seed disinfectant. This is simply an extra precaution, and is not absolutely necessary when the soil sterilizing dust has been used.

Sowing the Seed

BEFORE sowing the seed in the flat the surface of the soil is covered with powdered sphagnum moss, using an old flour sifter, to a depth of about one-eighth inch. This is pressed down firmly and allowed to stand a few minutes until it is moist. The seed is then sown in properly labeled rows, spaced from two to three inches apart, care being taken not to plant the seed too thick. After the seed is sown, powdered sphagnum moss is again sifted over the entire surface to a depth of at least one-half inch and pressed down, covered with burlap or cloth and watered thoroughly.

Seeds sown in January of many varieties will be ready to transplant into other flats, about two inches apart, in June, or when true leaves appear. The transplanting soil should be two parts garden soil, one part fine peat, one part old cow manure. These transplants also are placed on the north side, shaded a few days and watered regularly.

Transplanting Seedlings

SEPTEMBER appears to be the best time to set out the seedlings in their permanent locations in the garden. The soil is dug out to a depth of twelve to fifteen inches. A good layer of old cow manure or compost is placed in the bottom, and the soil replaced is mixed with peatmoss, driconure or a mixture of both.

The method used in setting these seedlings is to put a quantity of fine peatmoss around each plant after it is placed in the ground, taking care to keep the centre of the plant clean. The bed is watered thoroughly and shaded for a few days.

Most of the instructions for permanent planting of primulas call for part shade, but it has been found that the polyanthus type can be grown in either sun or shade. It is true, however, that the other varieties do require part shade.

A point to remember is that primulas do not like to have water standing around the crowns, especially during the Winter, and that is one of the reasons for the above recommendations that the soil contain peat, so that good drainage can be obtained and still hold moisture to the roots.

After a good stand of the primula has been obtained, many of them may be separated at the end of two years. The best time for separation is just after they have ceased blooming unless the weather is too hot. In this case the dividing of the clumps can be deferred until September. Some varieties multiply very rapidly, and the grower can soon have hundreds of fine blooming plants—a rich reward for any painstaking effort that may have been required to get them started.

Plants bought at Christmas need special care when brought into your home. Some of them have been grown in a warm greenhouse and cannot stand much cold. A sunny position in a warm room—not too hot—and careful watering will bring them through.

Agricultural Outlook for Canada Is Analyzed by Farm Experts

AGRICULTURAL experts of the Dominion Government have predicted what the farmers of Canada might expect in 1939. In their annual survey of the agricultural outlook, they analyzed crop and market prospects so the farmers could adjust their plans to changing conditions of supply and demand in both home and foreign markets.

They predicted some general improvement in prices of farm products in 1939 as a result of moderately increased industrial activity. At the same time they warned general activity would not likely be restored to 1937 levels.

The major economic factor clouding the outlook, they said, is the fact the 1938 world wheat crop was the largest on record and supplies are far in excess of world requirements.

Next season's world wheat prospects are still in an undetermined quantity. An expected reduction in world wheat acreage, especially in the United States, will be a factor, but even more important than known acreage trends will be the 1939 world average yields.

"Normal yields on an acreage thus adjusted would bring total production more into line with consumption requirements," the survey says.

Price Decline Checked

ON the credit side of the ledger was the fact the severe decline in world prices of farm products apparently had been checked in the last half of 1938. Also, larger supplies of wheat and other farm products in Canada, with the help of new trade agreements, would probably result in a greater volume of agriculture exports in 1939.

Production of most agricultural products showed a substantial increase in 1938, but prices declined much more rapidly than prices of other commodities. The low level of farm prices was a factor retarding general economic recovery, according to the survey.

It summarizes the outlook for income from the more important farm commodities: "With more hogs to market in 1939 as a whole, and prospects of a steady demand at home and in export markets, the income from hog products in 1939 should not be any less than that obtained in 1938, even though the average price paid for hogs during 1939 may be somewhat lower.

Returns From Sheep

"INCOME from beef cattle should be approximately the same in 1939 as in 1938, as reduced marketings are expected to be offset by higher prices. Returns from sheep and wool in 1939 are not likely to be very different from that obtained in 1938.

"It is likely that the gross cash income from all dairy products will not be any higher in 1939, and because of current prospects for lower butter fat prices it is possible that it might be slightly lower during the early part of 1939.

"The probability of a favorable export market for eggs and poultry and the outlook for some improvement in business conditions in 1939 are factors which, in spite of prospects of increased supplies, favor as large a gross income from poultry and eggs in 1939 as was obtained in 1938.

"As far as international trade in agricultural products was concerned, the immediate outlook—having in view the present low level of prices and the increased supplies, especially of wheat—lends but little encouragement to the prospect for early reduction of such trade barriers."

Most encouraging element in the outlook for international trade was the upturn in business activity in the United States, which began in the third quarter of 1938.

Demand in Great Britain

REGARDING business with the United Kingdom, there appeared to be limits to the increase of imports there, even with continued rearmament demand, "unless a substantial expansion of exports should develop," which depended largely on international political factors.

"A restoration of international security would definitely improve the outlook for world trade. In any case, if the present business revival in the United States is sustained, it will do much to turn the course of international trade upwards again."

On Canada's own crop prospects, the survey reports moisture conditions in the Prairies last Fall varied considerably, with above-normal rainfall in most of Alberta and normal moisture supplies in Saskatchewan, except in the southern districts. Practically all Manitoba had an "extremely dry" Autumn.

"Very little seed will be required and with the availability of adequate supplies of rust-resistant wheats it is expected that all Manitoba and Eastern Saskatchewan growers of common bread wheats will use seed of the rust-resistant type."

Supplies of Seed Grain

SUPPLIES of registered and certified grades of seed grain for 1939 seed are practically double those of the previous year. The supply of seed of Thatcher and other rust-resistant varieties should be abundant for 1939 seeding, the survey says, advising further replacement of susceptible varieties with this seed in areas in Manitoba and Saskatchewan where black stem rust occurs.

Flaxseed prices, the statement said, might be expected to remain, especially as Canadian production is still considerably below domestic requirements.

Lower prices were forecast for clover, alfalfa and grass seed, in view of increased production of most of those seeds and present weak export demand, due to larger than usual world supply.

Christmas Cactus Must Be Starved to Yield Profusion of Bloom

CHRISTMAS cactus is the common name given to Epiphyllum truncatum because some forty years ago it was the most popular Christmas flowering plant. Poinsettias, azaleas and cyclamen have pushed the Christmas cactus into the background of florist offerings at this season in recent years. Nevertheless, it is still a dependable Winter-flowering plant.

It is amazing that so small a plant as Christmas cactus will bear flowers. A long, pointed, vivid bud hangs from a plant no more than four or five leaves in length. But in all fairness, it must be admitted that many homes harbor large old plants fitting nothing less than four or five-inch pots, which never show signs of a bud.

A commercial grower of Christmas cactus offers the theory that old plants must be in a starving and dry condition in order to form buds. His suggestion is to withhold plant food and to water only enough to keep the plant alive, then when the tiny buds protrude from the leaves, to increase the amount of water gradually in order to make the buds open fast. This grower's theory is based on the fact that plants bud and flower in an effort to reproduce themselves when conditions are not favorable to continued growth. Of course, sun is necessary for either growth or flower production.

Easy to Propagate

NEW plants are easy to propagate. The flat, inch-long leaves from an old plant form roots quickly if inserted in a pot of coarse sand. The smallest plants will flower the first year, and after two years without coddling, should develop into heavy, floriferous plants.

Equally old as a house plant is the Euphorbia, know as Crown-of-Thorns. Its bristling thorns and severe stem lines are eminently appropriate where modern decoration is the keynote. As with the Christmas cactus, one often buys a small plant, dotted with orange scarlet flowers, only to find when these blossoms wither that there is an indefinite wait for a second burst of flowers.

The difficulty with both these plants is not continued growth but forcing of blossoms. Sunlight and moderate, even warmth are always necessary. A pot-bound plant in poor soil, receiving the minimum amount of water, is far more likely to blossom than one with plenty of room in rich soil. The complaint that buds dry up without opening can be blamed on too dry an atmosphere. This condition is remedied by keeping a pan of water in each group of house plants or by spraying their foliage occasionally with water from an atomizer.

Drive to End Disease of Cattle in England

A DRIVE to eliminate diseases, particularly bovine tuberculosis, among livestock in England and Wales is being started at the beginning of the new year.

Most interesting among the plans is the division of the country into areas which will be progressively closed to all cattle which cannot pass the tuberculosis test. As each area is made disease-proof, others will be selected, until the whole country has been systematically covered.

The authorities directing the experiment believe that this can be rapidly accomplished, and in a few years' time bovine tuberculosis will be entirely wiped out in England.

At present, it is known, nearly half the dairy cattle in Britain is affected by bovine tuberculosis, which can be sometimes communicated to human beings. The disease is also reducing the average full productive life of milking cattle by as much as two years.

Premiums for Higher Grades

THE Milk Bill, which is just being presented for its second reading, provides further inducements to milk producers to fight tuberculosis by offering premiums as high as four and one-half cents a gallon for the higher grades.

Measures to safeguard and improve milk production will be additional to compensation to farmers for animals slaughtered to prevent the spread of disease.

It is estimated that diseases in livestock are at present causing direct losses to farmers of England and Wales at the rate of $70,000,000 a year. Indirect losses to the industry and the nation in wastage and disorganization is placed at not less than $200,000,000 annually.

Last year, 22,426 cows in milk and other cattle suffering from tuberculosis were destroyed.

The Skating Party

MADGE Laurie was arranging the supper table when the phone bell rang. She hastened to the little nook in the hall where the phone stood on a small table.

"Hello!" she answered.

"You, Madge?"

"Hello, Jean!"

"Say, Madge, we are getting up a skating party tonight. There's a full moon and the ice is grand. It's going to be such fun."

Madge stood with the receiver in her hand, a sudden choky feeling of disappointment gathering in her throat.

"I'd love to, Jean," she answered hesitatingly, "but I am not sure if I can manage it."

"That's all right, my dear," Jean cheerfully assured Madge. "It will be nine before the moon is riding high. Kit can go to the first performance and be home in plenty of time to let you off."

"She could, Jean, very nicely," slowly returned Madge, recalling to mind a trifle impatiently Kit's unwillingness to share the responsibility of the sick room, declaring "She'd get the sniffles if she so much as put her nose inside the door." "I'm afraid, Jean, I cannot say for sure just now. Suppose I phone later. It's only five o'clock—plenty of time."

"Mind you do," Jean entreated.

Kit at this moment entered the house with an armful of school books, which she threw down on the hall table with a clatter. Madge came forward, wagging a reproving finger at her sister.

"Who's that on the phone, Madge?"

"Jean Murray. The Murrays are giving a skating party and have asked me to join them."

Kit made a wry face. "Have you forgotten," she queried sharply, "I promised the Smith girls I would go to the show with them?"

"No, I had not forgotten, Kit. Which performance are you going to?"

"The early performance."

"You will be home by nine," Madge declared, joy surging within her. "I could leave then. Mother is feeling better and will be tucked away for the night. Be on the alert, though, in case she needs anything."

Kit stared. "Well, I like that," she mumbled peevishly. "I have oceans of home work to do and will be all tuckered in when I'm through."

At six o'clock a car horn tooted outside. It was the Smith girls. Kit was ready and hurriedly left the house to join them. Madge then telephoned Jean, who promptly answered.

Another moment Madge had placed the receiver on its hook and gone off to make her mother comfortable for the night. This accomplished, she settled to await her sister. At nine o'clock she was ready, skates strung over her shoulder, woolen mitts ready to slip on her hands as soon as she heard the warning toot. Kit, however, had not arrived when Jean at last sounded her car horn outside the house. Madge opened the front door and in a shaky voice answered: "Kit hasn't arrived yet, Jean, but do come in."

"No, I won't come in, Madge. I'll go round and get the others and call on my way back. Kit will be in by then, I should think."

"Oh, sure," replied Madge.

At nine-thirty Jean returned, but still Kit was absent.

"I'm afraid, Jean," Madge said with a little gulp, "you must go on without me. Kit is not home yet."

"Oh, Madge, what a shame!" she cried. Then suddenly she thought of her sister. "Why not," she queried inwardly, "ask Deborah to relieve Madge?" A good idea, she decided, but said nothing to Madge as a few moments later she drove off with the others to the lake, one mile distant. In a very short time she was back at her own home. Bursting in upon her sister, she entreated:

"Oh, Deb, be an angel. I want you to mind house for Madge Laurie. Her mother is sick and Kit has gone to the show and is not home yet. Nasty little thing," declared Jean disgustedly, "she knew Madge wanted to join the skating party."

"Oh, you're a darling," Jean cried happily.

Ten minutes later the two sisters confronted a very surprised Madge, who had answered the door to their summons.

"I can't leave mother, Jean."

"You can," Jean declared merrily. "Deb is here to look after your mother, so put your things on and come along."

"It doesn't seem true, Jean," Madge declared, when a little later Jean had parked her car and with Madge was making her way towards the boisterous, merry skaters.

"It's all true, my dear," Jean returned, laughing. "Here, I'll help you on with your skates." Presently they were swallowed up in the crowd.

Presently the two girls were matching their cleverness in cutting the figure eight. It was not long before they were surrounded.

Kit stared.

"Madge!" she cried, astonished. "I thought she was home. How did she get here, I wonder."

"I'll tell you, Kit," answered Jean Murray, who skated near enough to observe Kit and catch her last words.

"My sister is with your mother. Aren't you a little ashamed of yourself, Kit?"

At that moment, unaware of the clapping and the "Well done, Madge," coming from many admirers, Madge glided up to where Jean and Kit stood with the Smith girls.

"Hello, Kit!" she greeted affably, "you here?"

With this, they left Kit, standing looking very foolish and out of things.

"They've gone," Kit said gloomily, looking at Madge, but Madge was too good-natured to say, "Well, what did you expect when they discovered you acted so meanly." She said instead,

"Come and join the skating party, Kit; it's lots of fun!"

The Sands of Time

WE took our watch to the watchmaker, telling him it had gone splendidly till the last day of the holiday. "Then it stopped," we said, "though the spring has not gone."

The watchmaker did not reply. He had opened the watch and was peering into the works through a magnifying glass. Presently he looked up. "And what kind of weather had you on the south coast?" he asked.

"Oh," we began, "we had rain at first, but it was fine afterwards." Then we stopped short, looking at the watchmaker curiously. "But how do you know we have been to the south coast?" we demanded.

He smiled. "That's easy," he answered. "If you had examined as many watches as I have you would learn to distinguish the various kinds of sand. The south coast sand is fine and soft. The sand at Blackpool and Morecambe is sludgy. Bridlington and Filey have hard grit. It is sand that has stopped your watch. I'll soon put it right."

We came away with a little more respect for the old watchmaker than we ever had before.—By the Pilgrim, in The Children's Newspaper.

The Elusive Bottle

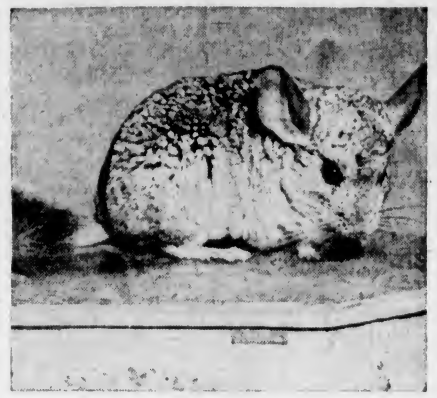

EVERY day somebody invents something which no one can ever use, but now and then comes to light an invention which is exceptionally ingenious even if it makes us smile to hear of it. This kind of invention has lately caused a smile in America's patent office, and it might be called the elusive poison bottle.

From time to time we hear of people picking up a bottle of poison and drinking its contents by mistake. No one, it seems, could pick up Gustav Hoffman's poison bottle by mistake, for it is designed in such a way that every time one tries to grasp it the bottle slips through the fingers. It is impossible, or so says the patent, to lift it from the shelf, for the bottle is like a cone, and is so smooth and suppery that one may try over and over again to lift it from the shelf, only to find that the hand slips up towards the top. To pick up a bottle of this kind by mistake is next to impossible. It is claimed that the only way to remove the bottle is to pull it along the shelf till part of it overhangs. It may then be lifted.—Children's Newspaper.

Monkey Island

MONKEY Island has just been opened at the Melbourne Zoo. There is nothing else quite like it in the world.

Forty Rhesus monkeys live in a pavilion at one end of a triangular island. All sorts of acrobatic performances will be enjoyed by the visitors, for besides the usual swings, poles and seesaws there is a sort of pagoda in the middle of the island, with a spiral on it, on which the monkeys will do roundabout performances. Rhesus monkeys are good swimmers, and they will get plenty of practice in the moat, which is twenty feet wide. Outside the moat there is a wall eight feet high.—The Children's Newspaper.

The Story of a Bundle of Letters

THE welcome accorded by grown-ups to the volume of Adventures and Misgivings is tinged with deep regret, for it is the last work we shall ever have from Mr. E. V. Lucas.

These delightful essays, latest evidence of the immense variety of interests that appealed to him, make us wonder whether he ever turned to special account a wonderful experience he had in preparing his most important work, his three-volume edition of the Letters of Charles Lamb.

A leading authority on the subject, he had already issued a smaller edition of the letters, and this, coming to the hands of Mrs. Alison Anderson, led her to devote the remaining ten years of her life to a pursuit of all she could discover concerning Lamb and his sister and the hosts of unremembered people who survive for us as mere names because he wrote of them or to them. Her success in her difficult task was, in its way, without parallel.

Many of Lamb's letters remained unpublished a century after they were written, and the bulk of them were in America, with the remainder in private possession in England. Mrs. Anderson got in touch with people on both sides of the Atlantic wherever the letters existed, and she filed the letters in two volumes destined for the British Museum.

Whenever she heard of a letter in England she would visit the owner to secure a copy of it. Sometimes she could have only the merest glance at the letter, not time for deliberate copying, so she trained her memory, with the result that on once reading over a letter she was able to memorize its contents. Then, retiring to the nearest tea shop, she would write it down at once, returning for another peep at the original to make certain that she had copied correctly and that she had got the right date.

The Acrobatic Crocodile

WHEN an Imperial Airways flying boat was taking off at Port Bell on Lake Victoria, Africa, not long ago the pilot and passengers saw a most unusual occurrence.

About forty yards away a nine-foot crocodile was leaping out of the water, its whole body visible as it cleared the surface by about four feet. Natives in the district were much interested in the crocodile's feat, as nobody had ever thought it possible for these cumbrous reptiles to be able to jump full length out of the water like this.—The Children's Newspaper.

Games and Tricks

Neighbors

IT is best to play it in a large room or hall. One player takes a place in the centre of the room, and the rest sit on chairs in a circle round her, leaving plenty of room for passing about. Then the one in the centre looks at one of the players, and asks, "Are you pleased with your neighbors?" On being told "No," she asks, "Whom would you like?" Two people are then named, who have to change with the neighbors of the person spoken to, and the player in the centre tries to get one of the chairs which are for the time vacated. If she succeeds, the one left without a chair must take her place and try to capture a chair in turn.

The Small Race

THIS is a most amusing game. Fasten a sheet of paper bearing the words "Losing Post" on a wall, or if you are playing outdoors, pin the sheet of paper on a fence or tree. Then choose an umpire and tell the rest of the players to go down on hands and knees side by side, about six yards from the "Losing Post." At the word "Go" the players start off and crawl as slowly as possible to the losing post. The umpire must keep a sharp watch on the players to see that they do not remain stationary; if they do they must leave the game. The last one home is the winner.

Riddle-Me-Dee

I am a word of letters four.
Cut off my tail and I am not.
Curtail once more and you will find
I'm—no! You must discover what!
Answer—Note, not, no.

Encircling the stately tower,
Transpose me, and you take my all—
I am the smallest of the small.
Answer—Moat, atom.

My first is in Washing, but never in Tub.
My second's in Towel with which you must rub.
My third you will want if you're having a bath.
My fourth is in Hilltop, but never in Path.
My fifth makes a Rim into something that's neat.
My sixth is in Shovel as well as in Heat.
My whole—can you guess?—is a treasure indeed.
To get it and keep it, great care you will need.
Answer—Health.

The Penny on the Paper

HERE is an amusing trick to show to a friend. Fill a tumbler almost full of water and then, across the top of the glass, tie a piece of tissue paper. Now rest a penny on the paper and announce that you are going to make the coin fall into the tumbler without touching the glass, the paper or the penny.

Most people will think that this is quite an impossible thing to do. You will, however, show them that it can be done. Get a small jug and from this allow a few drops of water to fall on the paper. Nothing will happen for a few moments, but, eventually, the tissue paper will become so damp and rotten that it is no longer able to support the penny, which will fall into the glass.

Match Tricks

TRY this match trick. Tell someone to lay out two rows of matches, using as many as he likes so long as the top row has one more match in it than the lower row.

You must not look at the matches. When he has arranged the matches, tell him to take out a number (which you name) from the bottom row.

Next he must take out as many matches from the top row as are left in the bottom. Then the bottom row is removed altogether. Then you announce the number of matches left on the table, although you have never once looked at the matches.

The Magic Label

THIS trick tells you how to stick a label on the inside of a bottle. Perhaps your friends will tell you that this trick is impossible, but you can prove them to be wrong.

Pour some water into a bottle and lay it on its side. Wrap a label around a pencil; remove the pencil and push the label into the bottle. The label, floating inside the bottle, will unroll and spread against the wall of the bottle. Shake the water out, drop by drop, after the label rests in the desired position. The label will gradually come to rest fastened to the inside of the bottle.

6. He allowed dinghies to be let out on hire.

The Noah's Ark Man

A CORRESPONDENT traveling in Yorkshire has sent this little story of a village craftsman still happy in his work though well past man's allotted span of threescore years and ten.

He is John Gall, and his home is at Poole in Wharfedale, where good Yorkshire folk look from their pleasant gardens across the river to Leathley. Flowers grow round the cenotaph to those who died for peace, and beside it stands the little church. Behind the church is the house where John Gall, alone since his wife died a year ago, still works and dreams his dreams.

To the Yorkshire people thereabouts John Gall is the Noah's Ark Man, for he has made a name for himself with his wooden animals. When he was a railwayman he painted pictures, but his skill lies in carving animals out of odds and ends of wood, shaping and painting them true to life, and he will make a man's dog, his cow, his pig, or his favorite duck. He has a fine model of a fen cart and horse, true in every detail, but is most proud of his model of the old wooden fen-plough used by his father, drawn by his horse and bullock. With his penknife and simple tools, working on his kitchen table and at the sink, he has made all the King's soldiers, as well as a host of animals which grown-ups and children have been proud to possess.—C.N.

The Year's Festivals

The Feast of Lanterns

"EARLY in February," began Aunt Malmie to the assembled Maxton family, "the Chinese celebrate their lovely Feast of Lanterns, and in this bag you'll find some Chinese sweetmeats, litchi nuts and tea. We'll nibble moon cakes and sip our tea in real Chinese style if mother will trust us with her beautiful Chinese cups."

"Yes, indeed," nodded Mrs. Mathilda Maxton.

"Oh, thank you both." Madge and Mudge sounded like a duet, as they ran off to prepare this dainty and unusual afternoon tea.

"And now the story," suggested Madge, flicking a crumb of rice wafer off Minnie's whiskers, to be deftly caught by Matt, who had finished his share long ago.

"Tory," echoed Midge, also a trifle crumby and quite willing to allow the collie to help him clean up.

"This is about the time for the Chinese New Year. You remember that I told you it is reckoned from the first moon after the sun enters the constellation Aquarius, not earlier than January 21 or later than February 19. There is a legal holiday of three or four days, but the celebrations go on much longer, the shops often closing for two weeks. It is a rule that all debts must be paid and all accounts settled with the ending of the old year. Then the cities are made gay with lanterns and artificial flowers. Mottoes are strung up on red papers, or blue ones if there has been a death in the house. The streets are thronged with gay crowds dressed in their best and brightest silks and satins. Whatever the sacrifice, even the poorest obtain finery to wear, or remain hidden.

The Chinese men, not the women, receive and pay calls, each one expecting visits from his inferiors and paying them to his superiors, or at least leaving cards which are thin strips of scarlet paper with the name of the sender in black characters. People meeting salute each other with the words, 'Kung-hi! Kung-hi!' meaning 'I humbly wish you joy,' or 'Sin-hi! Sin-hi!' meaning 'May joy be yours,' so probably our custom of making New Year visits and wishing folks 'A happy New Year' came to us from China.

"Then about the same time occurs the Feast of Lanterns, or one of the Festivals of the Unforgotten Dead celebrated in China and Japan. This calls for the most gorgeous robes and finest lanterns of all. Grandmothers open their treasure chests and take out daintily painted, embroidered or jeweled lanterns so precious that they have become valued heirlooms, and vests and trousers and robes of fine brocade, golden yellow, jade green, violet, richly embroidered, tasseled with gold or silver and pendant pearls, to be worn to welcome the spirits of the dead who will thread their kindly, silent way through the throngs, watching and enjoying their special festival.

"In the kitchens much food is prepared for visitors, small balls of mincemeat covered with sugar, flat, round, crisp moon cakes sweetened with honey, stacks of sweetmeats of many kinds; while outside, mothers and children and servants, in fact everyone, helps to string myriads of lovely lanterns across the courtyards and the streets. From every tree and bush, bridge and arch, float bright streamers or gay festoons of artificial flowers. Such skill the Chinese display in blending brilliant colors! The children tie bright balloons to the little glass bracelets on their wrists, or set free gas-filled ones, from which hang marvelous little chimes of bells whose sweet music tinkles softly down. At twilight the lanterns are lit and the strangely beautiful procession of lanterns glides gently by, huge ones borne aloft on bamboo poles by men, gauzy ones swaying from the hands of children, all the exquisite work of patient, skilful artists. It seems that no two are alike, that all the flowers and fruit, the birds and fishes and beasts of China are represented here, even temples and ships that sail, some are made to roll along the ground and yet keep lighted, and then amid firecrackers and drums comes the great dragon breathing mists of perfume and showers of tiny gifts from his terrible jaws as he turns his great horned head this way and that. His splendid, awe-inspiring passing is the climax. There follows a group of little girls singing, and the much-loved Feast of Lanterns is over."

A Swing on an Elephant's Trunk

A SOUTH African hunting in the Lourenco Marques territory had a strange experience not long ago.

He was out elephant hunting with a companion when suddenly he heard a loud trumpeting. He went in the direction of the noise, and was faced with a young elephant about a year old. The animal scented him and charged. The hunter caught hold of its trunk, and was swung to and fro like a pendulum.

In the end the elephant was persuaded to let go, when, much to the hunter's surprise, it followed them back to camp, and enjoyed the food offered to it. The animal is to be given to a zoo.—The Children's Newspaper.

Penguins and the Car

IT is often hard enough for the motorist to avoid running over dogs, pigs and poultry on country roads in this country, but in the coastal districts of New Zealand there are even penguins to look out for.

A motorist who was driving along the coastal road connecting the coal mining towns of Greymouth and Westport on the west coast of the South Island of New Zealand was surprised to encounter two penguins, which had come out of the sea and were taking a stroll down the road.

They were quite unafraid of the man and his car, although they can never have seen a car before. They made no attempt to move when the car approached, and the motorist had to get out and drive the penguins off the road as if they had been a pair of geese before he could proceed.

At My Window

I wave to them; they wave to me.
There's David Cox, and little Jean;
With Peter Oliver between.

In mind I join them at their game,
I find myself upon their train,
And, as it slowly moves along,
We shout our shout and sing our song.

What happy memories thrill my way
While watching children at their play!

A Prayer for This Night

LIKE a pillow to a tired head, like light to watching eyes, be Thou, our God, to us this night.

Wearied by the conflict of life, worn by the burden of the day, we seek Thee as our resting-place. May Thy eternal calm descend upon our troubled spirits, and give us all Thy peace.—Amen.

Great Britain and the Dominions Overseas

Last Survivor of Original Mounties Is Found in London

Octogenarian One of First Troops Sent to Suppress Bad Men Endangering Peace of Dominion —Little Trouble With Indians

LONDON (BUP).—A man who was one of the original "Mounties" who established law and order in the wild Northwest Territories of nineteenth-century Canada has been found living in London.

He is James H. Fullwood, 88, who believes that as ex-trooper 160 he is the only surviving member of the three troops of the newly-formed Northwest Mounted Police which, on June 13, 1874, crossed the United States border into Alberta.

They went to exterminate the Montana "bad men" who were debauching the Indians with whisky, robbing and murdering them, and preying on the few white settlers scattered through the territory.

ENDANGERING PEACE

So widespread had their activities become that they were endangering the peace of the Dominion.

The "Mounties" had orders to suppress them at all costs.

"We finally moved off from Fargo, North Dakota, in a column two miles long—horses and men, cattle, farm implements and Red River carts which you could hear squeaking a mile off," Fullwood said.

"We were making for Edmonton, Alberta, at the foot of the Rockies which we had to patrol. It was a hard trip of well over a thousand miles. It took us under five months.

"It was especially hard on the horses and cattle. Forage was scarce, and grazing generally non-existent. Yet day after day our horses covered fifty miles. Long before we made camp at night the men were leading them.

"About half way along our trail we had to establish a 'cripples' camp for men and horses. Shortly after that the main body which carried on had plenty of meat for the first time. We were in buffalo country.

FIRST POST BUILT

"Our Colonel MacLeod established his post in the Porcupine Hills. It was the first post ever built by the new police, and I helped with the construction. Today it is the town of Macleod.

"We had little trouble with the Indians. They soon realized that we were there to protect them and they became our allies in our fierce fights with the criminals."

REVEALS OLD CIVILIZATION

Discovery Made in South Africa of Fortifications And Graves

JOHANNESBURG (BUP). — Revelations about a native civilization in South Africa about 500 years ago, which may prove of high scientific importance, are expected from a discovery of the site of very early Bantu fortifications and graves near Dundee, South Africa.

The graves, encircled by stone setts, were evidently built within the cattle enclosure. The people of those early days apparently buried their dead in a squatting position. A large hole was made and the body trussed in a squatting position was slid in, after which stone slabs were placed in position around it.

In the case of a man of high rank, it is said that the natives would place the body in position, and then, after slaughtering many people and cattle, would throw the corpses into another part of the grave and cover them up.

IMPREGNABLE HILLTOPS

The fortifications and graves, as in the cases of other discoveries, are situated on impregnable hilltops. On the new site near Dundee lower fortifications guard several springs, and nearby are three large caverns capable of sheltering many people, with entrances small and well concealed.

Within the caverns were found piles of bones of different animals and bone and stone implements.

The supposition is that an early wave of Bantu from the north and west went down into Natal and lived and had their kraals in the valleys, but fled to the hilltop forts in time of danger. The construction of these forts indicates a period when neither assegais, bows and arrows nor guns were used, the club or some other stone weapon being the most likely weapon. The fortifications are protected by maze-like traps in which an intruder could easily be polished off from above by a defender with a club.

JEW IS GENEROUS TO UNFORTUNATES

SINGAPORE (BUP). — When liners with Jewish refugees dock at Singapore, a Jewish resident goes aboard and gives a one pound note to each exile who says he is penniless.

He does this because in his youth he, too, was a refugee and recalled how glad he was when someone on board a liner gave him one pound.

Hundreds of Jewish refugees from Germany are passing through Singapore and other Malayan ports on their way to Shanghai, one of the few cities in the world where they find no immigration restrictions.

APPOINTED "BISHOP OF BROADCASTING"

LONDON (BUP).—The British Broadcasting Corporation has just appointed a new official "wowser."

He is Dr James William Welch, who becomes religion director of the B.B.C. this year in succession to the Rev. F. A. Iremonger. In effect the office is that of "Bishop of Broadcasting."

For Sundays Dr. Welch will become a kind of censor for broadcasting. Not only will he control all broadcast religious services over the London, Regional and Empire stations, but nothing is to be allowed on the air which he has not read first.

GET SERVANTS FROM HUNGARY

Three Thousand Girls Are Now Working in Homes Of England

LONDON (BUP). — Hungarian girls are the latest fashion in servants for British homes.

Three thousand are already working in the country and others are arriving daily.

Berlin's officially expressed wish that all German girls in service abroad should return home, owing to the shortage of female labor, is expected to take full effect here shortly. Of the 20,000 in Britain, it is estimated, 8,000 will have to give up their jobs almost immediately.

Another large agency in Haymarket, which was placing thousands of German and Austrian girls, has taken on two Hungarian interpreters and has readapted its organization with new headquarters in Budapest.

EXCELLENT SERVANTS

Most of the Hungarians coming over make excellent servants. They are, in the main, sturdy peasant girls who like hard work, cook well, are loyal and truthful and are clever needlewomen.

But few Hungarian girls can speak a word of English and hardly one employer in a thousand can speak Hungarian, and because the girls are brawny peasants they eat nearly twice as much as the average English servant.

They are far from economical.

Butter, eggs, cream, poultry and vegetables are remarkably cheap in their native Hungary, and the way they use these in the kitchen has alarmed the unprepared Englishwoman.

They do not like strict discipline. They often refuse to work in an officer's home because they fear any semblance of "military rule."

Britain Has Big Grain Reserves

LONDON (BUP).—In her vast storehouses in London, Liverpool and Cardiff districts, Great Britain has already enough grain to last a year.

Present stocks are sufficient, it is claimed, to feed the people for more than four months without altering the quality of the bread. By increasing the production of flour by mixing it with grains other than wheat, peas and beans, supplies are sufficient for at least a year.

It is understood that Germany's position is not as good as Britain's. Her stocks would not last longer than eight months.

ARE PREPARING GREAT DISPLAY

Wool, Industries and Travel Attractions to Be Featured By Australia

(Australian Press Bureau)

CANBERRA, Australia.—Brilliant lighting, artistic display and informative exhibits will be incorporated in the national exhibit being arranged by the Australian Government for the New York World's Fair.

The exhibit, which will cover 8,000 square feet on the ground floor of the British Empire building, will concentrate on three special aspects to depict the present development and the potential progress of Australia. These sections will be devoted to wool, and secondary industries and to travel attractions.

NO MERE DISPLAY

The wool section will not be a mere display of merchandise, but will seek through action exhibits, color, and mural decoration to give an impression of the world's most important wool producing country, which pastures over 110,000,000 sheep. It will emphasize the effective organization of the industry as an item of interest for the American producer. A series of show windows will display a range of the finest fabrics manufactured from Australian wool in the world's best factories.

In the Industry Section devices will be exhibited to illustrate the diversity of Australian industrial resources and production and to show the environment of industries which produce goods to the value of nearly $900,000,000 a year. This section will tell that Australia today is not solely a primary producing country, and it will prophesy Australia's rise as a great industrial nation in the world of tomorrow.

SUCCESSFUL TRIALS

It will show, in addition, how Australia has successfully experimented in the sphere of industrial arbitration systems, which have spelt substantial harmony between employer and employee.

A museum display in a modern setting will depict the unique birds and animals for which Australia is known throughout the world—the gentle koala, the platypus, and birds of brilliant plumage.

King George V's Statue

It was announced at a recent meeting of the executive committee of the King George V National Memorial Fund that the plan to erect a statue adjacent to Westminster Abbey had received the approval of the King and Queen and Queen Mary. Our photograph shows a model of the statue, the sculptor of which will be Sir Reid Dick, R.A. The architect for the scheme is Sir Giles Gilbert Scott. The model was executed by John B. Thorp, London.

Winter Sports Held In London Miniature Of Genuine Thing

Skiers Slide Down Mountain 100 Feet High—Jumps Are Provided, and Hurdle Races on Snowshoes Cause Much Fun

LONDON (BUP).—Crack skiers from Canada, the United States and Norway slide down an imitation mountain on imitation snow and give as good an imitation as they can of crack skiers sliding down a real mountain.

The display was staged at the Earls Court, the largest entertainment centre in Europe, with an area of twelve acres, a height of 118 feet, and capable of seating 20,000 people.

The replica of the mountain was about 100 feet high, the run being provided with a jump, decorated with a few real pine trees, well lighted, and covered with ten to twenty-five inches of "snow" made from uncounted tons of ice by a machine which swallows ice whole and spurts it out at the other end in the form of a snowstorm.

ORCHESTRA'S DANGER

The mountain, however, was too small for first-class skiing. The slope itself and the jump would prove no test for competent ten-year-olds, but the difficulty is stopping before you overshoot the arena and hit the orchestra. There is not sufficient runway at the bottom of the slope for even a crack jumper to try anything spectacular.

Consequently the jumps, though the maximum possible in the circumstances, hardly call for skiers of the championship class. They jumped in ones, twos and threes, and somebody jumped through a paper hoop. The slalom was difficult without being spectacular.

The crowd got a lot of innocent fun out of a hurdle race on snowshoes, gallantly run by "Prince Poking Fire." Peter Gavouzzi, Daniel Cunningham and Louis Thoraval the competitors wearing black tights and looking for all the world like medieval executioners.

Norman Gagne, one of Canada's Olympic Team and former Montreal champion, was one of the twenty-one men and women skiers, all of whom hold championship titles.

Their talent, however, hardly had sufficient scope to flower, but to the London audience groping through the Winter fogs, the sight of even a little mountain covered with snow was quite a thrill.

CANADIAN DOWNPOUR JUST SLIGHT SHOWER TO NORTH ATLANTIC

Birdum Creek, for example, reported 5.15 inches of rain in one day, and expects to do better than that before the rainy season finishes.

Darwin had thirteen inches of rain in November, compared with 2.2 in November last year, and an average rainfall for the month of four inches.

CAN FIND NO FLIES ON THE "QUEEN MARY"

LONDON (BUP).—The almost unlimited resources of the Queen Mary, Britain's luxury liner, failed on her last voyage when a passenger asked for a fly.

School Children Are Now Heavier

LONDON (BUP). — British school children weigh more today than their parents did at the same age, according to the annual report of the Chief Medical Officer of the Board of Education, Sir Arthur MacNalty.

Sir Arthur reports that in Reading since 1921 the average weight of twelve-year-old girls and boys has increased by about seven pounds.

MINISTER WAS ONCE A TRAMP

Canadian Clergyman Authority on "Spikes" of the Old Country

LONDON (BUP). — Rev. Norman Burns, minister of Tilehurst Methodist Church, who has fulfilled a travelling ministry in Canada and Labrador, surprised a gathering of homeless men in London by revealing that he was himself once workless and "on the tramp."

"Ten years ago," he said, "I was on the Thames Embankment myself. There is hardly a spike (workhouse) in all the big cities in England that I have not been in, and if you want some information about the best of them I will give it.

"I have tramped round England twice and been over to Ireland as well, but do not go there because they have rotten spikes.

"Ten years ago I was on the tramp. Eventually I came into contact with a number of business men in Newcastle, who sent me to a Methodist college. I went to Newfoundland to fill an emergency appointment.

"Later I attended McGill University and fulfilled a traveling ministry in Canada and Labrador. I entered the English ministry last year."

NEW AIR SERVICE STARTS IN MARCH

SYDNEY, N.S.W. (BUP).—The ten-hour flying boat service across the Tasman Sea from Sydney to Auckland, New Zealand, is expected to begin in March.

The flights will start in the early morning from both Sydney and Auckland, but later it is hoped to run a night service in which passengers will be able to sleep comfortably during the flight and have breakfast in New Zealand.

In addition to Quantas Empire Airways, which represents the Australian Government, the operating companies will be Imperial Airways, representing Britain and Union Airways, representing New Zealand.

On behalf of the three governments and also the Canadian Government, R.A. Wimbush, of the technical staff of Imperial Airways, is now in the South Pacific with echo-sounding gear, surveying flying-boat bases for the Trans-Pacific Empire service.

The sounding gear is to detect sandbanks, jagged coral and other dangers which might damage the flying boats in lagoons of Pacific atolls proposed for use as intermediate bases between Canada and New Zealand. The radio, weather, and general ground organization staffs of Pan-American Airways have been active on similar work in the Pacific for the past three years.

Snow in England Not So Common But Is Expensive

Army of 15,000 Worked Day and Night to Clear London Streets of "the Beautiful"—Post-office Service Well Maintained—All 1938 Murders Are Solved

By GLANVILLE CAREW

LONDON (BUP).—In this country we do not get a great deal of snow—not a great deal as, for instance, Canada would regard it. But when we do get a real storm the snowfall, by our standards, is very heavy indeed. Perhaps the uncertainty of there being snow in any quantity accounts for the lack of general prearrangement for dealing with snow if it does come.

For about a week, including Christmas, we were snowed up. Trains were in bad shape; running schedules all to pieces. Out of door work came to a standstill and very many thousands of pounds of wages lost, probably somewhere around $5,000,000. Shops suffered badly on their Christmas trade. The takings of the London Passenger Transport Board—the public utility service of London—dropped by about $525,000. General losses were very great; theatre audiences were small compared with the normal returns of the box offices at Christmas.

More than 15,000 men were employed continuously day and night in clearing London's snow, and it is calculated that within the week half a million tons of snow were carted away.

The general verdict is that however beautiful snow may be in the countryside and however charming it may look on Christmas cards, in London it is an unmitigated nuisance.

SERVICE MAINTAINED

One organization, which, in view of the weather conditions, worked really well, was the Postoffice. Notwithstanding holdups of trains by snow, the slowing up of delivery vans on the icy roads and the difficulties of postmen on foot, the service was well maintained.

Normally the Postoffice provides for the engagement of an extra staff for the Christmas season rush of 75,000 men, this year the number had to be increased to 80,000 extras. In London itself the Christmas staff was enlarged by an additional 1,000 men.

Only in one branch were the Postoffice services decreased for Christmas. That was the telephone service. Last year at Christmas the Postoffice authorities allowed one shilling calls for any distance within the British Isles. The result was so successful as to bring about something like chaos. It seemed as though every man, woman and child in the country rang up everyone else at the same time. Such was the congestion that calls normally immediate lengthened into hours. In bulk these were just family calls which in themselves were not important, but business people, especially those dealing in provisions, found themselves utterly unable to call for supplies and were at a standstill. So the experiment was choked by its own success.

ALL MURDERS SOLVED

With but one exception there has not been a single known case of murder in London during 1938 which has not been solved. The exception is a case, which, at this writing, is less than thirty-six hours old, so it hardly counts.

Taken altogether, the victory in the war on crime in London lies very certainly with the police. For instance, the "smash and grab" on jewelers' shops, expensive furriers and luxury stores in general, which a couple of years ago were rapidly becoming commonplace items of news, have been to all intents and purposes put an end to.

Much of this is due to the police wireless, to immediate co-operation between the police forces of London and the counties and to the flying squad and "Q" cars. The latter are very powerful high-speed cars skilfully camouflaged to look like anything but what they are. The "area" wireless scheme has been a great success, especially as regards speed of action. For instance, an emergency call was received at Scotland Yard from the eastern district; in one minute every station and car in the district knew all about it. In three minutes from the first call the police had entered a house and made an arrest. Another instance. A car was stolen in the southwest district, and the police were warned. Within the hour the stolen car was halted by an innocent looking "Q" car in the traffic of the West End and the occupants arrested.

ALWAYS WITH US

The unemployed are always with us—and, unfortunately both for themselves and the country, it looks likely that in large numbers they will always be.

We have unemployment services as good as, indeed, better than any others in the world. They are so good that they seem to be in danger of creating a sort of "professional" unemployed class.

At the present time the ordinary rank and file unemployed insured person receives automatically a certain allowance for a given period; many months at least. At the end of this period, if still unemployed, he, or she, goes before a committee—the Unemployed Assistance Board. "The U.A.B." The board enquires generally, and, contrary to earlier usage, by no means overkeenly, into his circumstances and make an allowance. This is generous and frequently more than his normal earnings. The allowances are given without limit of time, and there is no penalty for refusing suitable work, for voluntary leaving of jobs or rejection of an offer of training at Government expense.

The great majority of the unemployed are honest and self-respecting people who want to work, but in the words of Sir Ronald Davison—an expert on unemployment questions—"human nature, or a part of it cannot stand the strain of such an easy-going offer of perpetual maintenance by the state."

CASE HISTORIES

Case 1—Is a man thirty years old, has done no work for ten years, has married and had six children during that period, allowance is more than he has ever earned. Only remark on being interviewed was to demand extra Winter allowance.

Case 3—Man of twenty-nine; done no work since 1936; wife and children. Has refused work, does better on dole. Several times refused offers on training.

This sort of thing runs through whole families; it has become a sort of tradition of unemployment. It is asked why the administration cannot be stiffened, and why some work by recipients cannot be insisted upon. Meanwhile the mischief is spreading while nothing is done. And it has been spreading since 1925, when the U.A.B. took over. So what?
